Klien is found of throwing up red herrings (and it is begining to realy stunk from that the Facts is CW is not required to achive the stated pruposes of the ARS

many Hams NEVER use it and many rarely do the question the ProCoders avoid is how does code testing benifit the PUBLIC at large?

if there answer it does not realy that it can not be shown to then the question of wether it benifits Ham radio is moot and with the end of the treaty requirement I cointend (and others) that constutituionaly
the FCC lacks the POWER to require it when you add ADA which allows the disabled to choose thier accomdation (the FCC section you cite is belived by LWAYERS to LEGALY invalid, all it takes about 5K dollars to spare to prove it if an ADA chalange went we would have people like efectively not taking the test and yet demtrating that we HAVE some abilty to use the mode I have quite a bit of on AIR CW work with computers (I engaged for 2 reason to see how well it worked and to provide a an interactive target for code practice to friend of hgoing for various level of license surely even my worst detractors will grant if I can follow MY typing translated to Morse Coded CW at a given speed you can pass a test at the same speed)

as to machine morse in general I find I can decode with machine and panographic signal display to alow to see the signal I can follow the going of ARRL straigh key night fairly well, why isn't that enough if there were a need for CW?

The stated purposes as put forth in Part 97 would seem to support that. In case you didn't notice, I am not saying the FCC should be requireing the CW test.

True. And many Hams use it. I was on 20 meters this evening and the CW sub band was wall to wall operators --- much more than on the phone subband --- not that means manything special.

I suspect you are being kind. I fear many want the code requirement so as to protect their vision of what Ham radio should be. I am not sure that requiring CW and not requiring proficiency in any of the digital modes makes any sense. Its the inconsistency that seems weird.

I'm not sure I get your point. I can have someone read me a book (books on audio tape) , or I can read it myself. I prefer reading it myself. However, listening to an audio tape doesn't demonstrate that I can read.

My CW skills are always a challenge. Yet I can usually copy (<20 wpm or so) better than most software programs .. especially in noisy conditions QRM or QRN.

Again, I am not sure I think CW should be a requirement. I think it is good for the HOBBY. I am not sure it is relevant to the service regulated by the FCC.

Once again, Woger will be released from weekend jail, and he will be in his usual foul mood on Monday morning. Mark Morgan and Billy Smith should probably both spend the day avoiding Woger.

Tuesday would be a better day for them to reappear in the news groups. I suggest that they both resume posting on Tuesday, Oct 12, 2100.

Then you don't really know. You're just guessing, and passing off your uneducated guess as a fact.

> There is NO historical record of ANY broadcasting > station USING that single-high-power-special-carbon-Incorrect.

There is no historical record that you can find.

Also, note your original claim: (direct quote - see above to be sure)

"At NO TIME did any OTHER broadcaster or voice transmitter adopt the Fessenden brute-force amplitude modulator. NO ONE.
Not in the USA, not in Canada, not anywhere in the world."

"broadcaster or voice transmitter" - that means you claim that not only did broadcasters not use Fessenden's method, but that no experimenters, amateurs, commercial users or military units did, either.

The fact that you can't find an historical record doesn't mean you have proof it didn't happen.

Not me, Len. You're the one shouting and calling names because your claim has been shown to be unfounded.

You claim to be a "professional writer", but your logic and use of words is very sloppy.

> want to rationalize > your previous claim of "practicality" and are trying to Totally incorrect, Len.

I haven't said that you or anyone else here on rrap lied.

What you have done is to tell untruths, make mistakes, promulgate errors. That's not the same as lying.

For something to be a lie, the person stating it has to know it is untrue, and then state it as if it were true, with the intention of deceiving the reader or listener.

> >You don't know for sure. All you know is that you haven't come across > >any documentation that someone else adopted Fessenden's idea.

And that's true.

But it's not the same as:

"At NO TIME did any OTHER broadcaster or voice transmitter adopt the Fessenden brute-force amplitude modulator. NO ONE. Not in the USA, not in Canada, not anywhere in the world."

> and there has been LOTS of documentation about broad> casting for all of its existance...from manufacturers

That doesn't mean every attempt at voice radio from ~100 years ago was documented so that you could find it, Len. There are lots of things you don't know.

> Feel free to post ANY source that claims to have used > Reggie's brute-force modulator of a single-high-power-

Why?

Now you're just ranting. You're all angry and upset because, once again, you've been shown to be mistaken in your claim.

Here it is again:

"At NO TIME did any OTHER broadcaster or voice transmitter
adopt the Fessenden brute-force amplitude modulator. NO ONE.
Not in the USA, not in Canada, not anywhere in the world."

No mention of high power. No mention of "practicality", "studios" or a limit to just broadcasting.

Ever hear of loop modulation, Len?

You seem to think that a thing cannot be practical unless it is copied.
That's simply not true.

How do you know for sure, Len?

Now you're just making stuff up. What attitude should a veteran have? I've known plenty of military veterans, Len - from WW2, Korea, Vietnam, and more recent conflicts. None of them display an attitude or behavior like yours.

> >If I had a dollar for every time you've mentioned your Army experience

More than enough, probably.

You've been posting here to rrap for over ten years, Len. That's more than 3650 days. Probably more than 4000 days.

If you mentioned your Army days here just once a day, that would be over 3650 dollars. While you don't post here every day, there have been days when you mentioned your Army experience more than once. In fact, you sometimes mention it more than once per post!

> Not enough to cover the costs of your HBR > clone pictured on Kees Talen's website.

Heck, Len, that receiver only cost me $10. You've probably mentioned your Army experience ten times this month!

And my "Silver Receiver" (aka Southgate Type 4) on the HBR website is not a clone of anything. It's a unique design. Perhaps I should describe that receiver - it had some unusual features. Like the ability to use a wide variety of tubes without being modified.

> You don't...because you NEVER CHECK.

How can I be sure that the information you give is correct, Len? You can't both give the info and the check method.

> All you do is > say I am "in error" (LIE).

Nope. You're in error - again!

Being in error and lying are two different things, Len.

I haven't said that you or anyone else here on rrap lied.

What you have done is to tell untruths, make mistakes, promulgate errors. That's not the same as lying.

For something to be a lie, the person stating it has to know it is untrue, and then state it as if it were true, with the intention of deceiving the reader or listener.

It's not me who said it. The Army did.

Filaments are used in directly heated cathodes.

Heaters are used in indirectly heated cathodes.

The tubes in ENIAC were mostly indirectly heated types. Therefore, the term "heaters" is more accurate than "filaments".

On the issue of ENIAC - yes, I do.

Just take a look at this (if you have the guts):

Karl Kempf
Historical Officer
Aberdeen Proving Ground, MD
November 1961

Available online at:

http://ftp.arl.mil/~mike/comphist/61ordnance/index.html

That's official Army history. Do you know more about ENIAC than the Historical Officer at the Aberdeen Proving Grounds?

Here's the chapter on ENIAC:

http://ftp.arl.mil/~mike/comphist/61ordnance/chap2.html

Read what the official Army historical officer wrote, and you'll see I'm right. They specifically mention the relay computers as taking all night to perform a computation, and to being outmoded by ENIAC and its successors.

ENIAC was a bargain, too - cost less than a million dollars.

and btw:

ENIAC did not used BCD (binary-coded-decimal). It was a true decimal machine, with decimal ring counters and ten data lines for each digit. The use of decimal rather than binary architecture was the only fundamental part of ENIAC's structure that was not copied in later machines.

Now be a big boy and admit your mistakes, Len.

Since it's not Roger posting as he's in jail, it must be his mother. I wonder if she uses his callsign on the hams bands and makes contacts for him too? No one would ever know if she's good at CW, PSK31, RTTY, and packet. But if she does ATV, that would be one friggen scary image on your TV set. Also as bad as Woger at himself.

No-Codes are violent. I don't know why people want more of them on ham

Hello John. I'm KB9RQZ, and I just love CW. We need to bring back code testing for Techs. 13 wpm should work fine, Then we can keep the riff-raff off the repeaters and end all the bogus moon bounce contacts.

I've been burned by bogus EME contacts, but I'm a retard.

I think it's because candidates don't have to study as much as they used too before taking the exams. Exams are easier now so some of the more smarter CB'ers have been able to pass and they brought some of their old CB operating habbits to ham radio.

We're rebuilding RRAP. We need to alert internet hams that we are getting general amateur radio and policy threads going again there. Many of the good hams on usenet left RRAP when Mark Morgan, and Roger Wiseman polluted the group, but discussions have started there again. Cross-posting will end in earnest once good hams move back into RRAP, and the riff-raff like KB9RQZ, AB8MQ and N0VFP move out.

Looking forward to more policy and pro-CW discussions with all you fine hams. :)

Could you pass all the tests again today, or would you have to study a little first? My arguement has always been for the quality of licensees, not the quantity of them.

Requiring an 85% passing score means more study before taking the exams, which translate to a better understanding of the material. My arguement has always been for the quality of licensees, not the quantity of them.

Hams should be skillfull. Proficency at CW gives hams a way to communicate, when no other way might be possible.

Requiring future study in order to continue to be licensed will make for more knowledgable hams. They will be assets. A national resource. My arguement has always been for the quality of licensees, not the quantity of them.

Everyone is welcome in the "good-ole-boy" club if they're not lazy and are willing to learn. If not, there's always CB for them. My arguement has always been for the quality of licensees, not the quantity of them.

Having to work a little to get/gain something gives a little sense of pride in the accomplishment and you appreciate it and take care of it. It's valuable.

Getting handed something for nothing cheapens it. Don't cheapen ham radio. Rigs don't come with kill-filters to notch out bad ops and lids, so let's support policy that minimizes the number of lids on the bands.

Come back to HF Todd, your whining and complaining is hilarious. When hams catch you on the bands they must really laugh their ass off. You're almost as good as Liberty net.

I could pass them all again, no study needed. And that goes for written, Morse Code receiving and Morse Code sending.

Bring out any FCC amateur radio license test from Novice to Extra, from any time since I first got my license in 1967, and I'll pass it. I'll probably even be able to pass tests from long before I was licensed, too.

Every so often I try an online practice exam, just to be sure. No problem.

BUT

I don't see any reason to require routine retesting of hams who haven't broken the rules. FCC trusts us to keep current - that's part of the "conditions of grant".

FCC currently uses retesting as a sort of enforcement tool - if someone acts like they don't know what the rules are, or if there is some doubt as to whether a test session was on the up-and-up, FCC will sometimes require a specific retest.

If you demand that all hams be retested, what you're telling FCC is that we cannot be trusted to keep up with the rules. Is that a good thing?

FCC doesn't require routine retesting of commercial licenses - why should they require it of amateurs?

And once again: Are you willing to volunteer your time to help with the restesting?

Very well stated, Jim. I particularly like the parts about the FCC's usage of the "retest" and the paragraph on "trust".

>If one looks at the Basis and Purpose for the government licensing Amatures,

Or theory - the only valid test is a practical one to demonstrate knowledge of operation, which has never been given, and the laws. No one builds any more, so knowledge of the circuits inside a radio isn't really needed. Nice if you want it, but not needed to operate.

>Though I am not sure it is the role of the FCC to do what is best for THE HOBBY.

If you look at the FCC's entire justification for the hobby, you'll see that CW wasn't an issue once AM was invented. But knowledge of digital modes should be tested for now. If the justification for the hobby has anything to do with anything.

Thanks, Dee.

One more point:

The only nonrenewable amateur license the USA ever had was the old Novice license. And it was only nonrenewable for about the first half of its existence (1951 to 1975).

The reason the old Novice was nonrenewable back then is that it wasn't meant to be a "permanent" license, but rather only a stepping stone to a permanent license.

All the currently-available license classes are meant to be "permanent" licenses - meaning they aren't only a stepping stone to a higher class.

Perhaps it could all be summed up in the old saying:

"Be careful what you ask for - you might get it!"

Now try when the signal is a few db UNDER the noise floor and you'll see why CW is still a valid mode. (I'm sure that, as a CW operator, you know what I mean.) How many db under the noise does a voice signal have to be before it becomes just part of the noise? (I believe the actual figure is 6db ABOVE the noise to be readable - that gives CW an advantage of about 12db.)

That's about twice the normal wall. You may already be past it without realizing it.

>FWIW, I have a hell of a time copying code a slow character speeds: < 10wpm

You remind me of when I took the CW test in Navy boot camp. My paper consisted of Ts and Es. When the instructor challenged me, I told him that I really couldn't copy anything under about 10, and I was more comfortable around 30. (I was taught CW by W2RD, who could copy 65 with a pen and an ink well, and talk to you while he copied.) The instructor took my challenge and cranked the TG34 (or Navy equivalent
- I can't recall any more) up to around 20. When he saw me yawning he cranked it up to 30.

5 minutes of perfect copy later ...

But 1wpm (which is what they gave you after "teaching" you E, I, S, H, T, M and O) was impossible for me. I couldn't hear the lengths of the spaces well enough to tell where the letters ended.

Well ... they used to require actual use for renewal, but with the change to "apply and ye shall get" lifetime licensing, you can get a GRL and keep it till you die without ever using it.

For about 90% of the things that used to require the license, you do not even need one anymore.
Some companies may require you to have one on the false security that if you have one , you know what you are doing. I had the First Class at age 22 and I have never seen a comercial TV or Radio transmitter. That was over 30 years ago.

That's the method of Jerry Ziliac, who sends the code at 21 WPM, so that the dits and dahs become a single entity. That only worked for me for some of the characters. The only 4-element Morse I know for sure is <Q> DAH-DAH di-DAH from the mnemonic PAY-DAY to-DAY. All the rest are a jumble.

Of course you're against improving yourself.

Even your "friends" have told you you're incompetent in English composition and need a spellchecker...You point-blank refuse to get on.

Therefore, PROOF POSITIVE that you are against improving yourself.

Most of the people who were "moving forward" half a century ago were ALSO folks who were active on and well known in HF circles...

Morkie, I will conceed that you know two things that I will never know...What it's like to lick my excrement off of another man's genitals, and the going welfare rates in Michigan.

Enjoy your win.

If there was ever a reason to change parties, knowing Morkie even CLAIMS to be a Republican is one of them.

However, when I give it some consideration, it is yet ONE MORE EXPRESSION of DECEIT on Morgan's part...The Republican Party is ALL ABOUT certain MORAL VALUES...Values that Morkie is "all about": violating!

He's an admitted liar, sexual deviate and as morally corrupt as any person can be and still hold American citizenship.

Morkie a REPUBLICAN...?!?!

In name only!

Hey Mark, this retard is following you around and harrassing you. You should complain his ISP about him and dont let the bitchwhore get way with it. He also violate his state laws and you state laws and you can file police complaint against the harrassment coward.

While not as central to the hobby as it was in the 50's and 60's. There are a lot of builders out there. Elecraft have thousands of radios out there. I am sure the Norcal series radios number in the many of thousands. Personnaly I have e K1, K2, (KX1 on order) and a Norcal 40M in addition to an ICOM on KF.

Circuit knowledge hasn't been NECESSARY for decades. Most kit radios of the 50's (I build some Heathkits ,myself as a kid and helped my Dad with a few large projects) had excellent instructions.

Robesin probably is.

His constant references to male genitalia and fixation on all things of a homosexual nature pretty much overcome his claims of being butch.

And a male nurse?

So...I make fun of Morkie and I am supposed to worry about someone "liking" me or "trusting" me in this forum...?!?!

You're a biggger idiot than I gave you credit for, Brain.

The people I am concerned about "liking" me or "trusting" me have nothing to do with this forum and probably never would.

And if they did, a brief overview of your demonstrated stupidity would lay-to-rest any concerns I would have about them being swayed by any criticisms I might "suffer" from YOU!

Just like Lennie the Loser, you try to infer some knowledge of "sicknesses" without an education in healthcare.

It fails.

What's the problem, Brain? Can't stand it when you have to face

That's probably too much to wish for. Mark is probably trapped in his outhouse.

Sure you are. You go after other people's wives and kids. You have a history of it.

A lengthier overview of your inability to play well with others, your fixation on the male genitalia and all things of a homosexual nature, propensity to drop hints and unsubstantiated claims of your imagined military service in the US Marine Corps, and outright lies that you tell about other people might change their minds about the swell guy

You're the one who claims that no degree is required to be a nurse.
Wouldn't it also possible that no degree is required to be a doctor?
At least in Tennessee?

Regardless of educations in healthcare, your nuts.

Uhhhhhhhhh. Yeh. It's right there where you are saying "my excrement..."

Maybe if you don't make such sick claims, and then don't quote yourself making those same sick claims, there wouldn't be any discussion about it.

In other words, clean up your act. What part of that can't you understand?

Do you think Paul Schlek is going to lett you play "Excrement Commando" in RRAP?

Sorry Robesin, it doesn't work that way. You quote yourself then claim that "Mork and you" thought it up. Try taking a little responsibility for yourself once in a while. Just once. The hardest part is taking that first step, but you're the only one that can do it. Best of Luck.

They had those well into the 1980's. man I really do miss those.

I have built more than my fair share of kit radios over the last couple of decades (its even more fun trying to build them by braille). its still an excellent learning experience (there is always going to come a time when being able to use a soldering iron will be helpful in repars).

But Steve took up the slack.

You know steve, when Woger, Markie, and Todd come back and do their routine crap follow-ups to you, this place is going to be a sewer for a few days. Woger's mother has three days to catch up on, and Markie will follow up to everything, and if there's nothing to follow up to, he reloads old stuff and spams that around. And Todd is a whiner.

Everything has been dumbed down, not just ham licenses. We can't have skills anymore in america, everyone has to be equal. That's what happens

If an amateur had to relay a through a country and the amateurs didn't know each other language they still could have passed it by CW and the message could have been delivered to someone that could read it. Not no more.

When things start failing communication wise worldwide, amateur radio might be all there is to relay messages, and the ITU just removed one of the legs of a three leg stool.

I don't have to - the Army already did:

"Two Bell Relay Computers were used. They were accurate, but slow and required expert maintenance. Dust and humidity adversely affected their

Yes, they do.

At least the US Army thinks so:

http://ftp.arl.army.mil/ftp/historic-computers/drawings/big-comp-tree.gif

The root of the tree is ENIAC.

Some quotes from Army history:

"During the period 1946 - 1955 the ENIAC was operated successfully for a total of 80,223 hours of operation. It performed about five thousand arithmetic operations for each second of its useful life. ENIAC led the computer field through 1952 when it served as the main computation machine for the solution of the scientific problems of the nation. It surpassed all other existing computers in solving problems involving a large number of arithmetic operations. It was the major instrument for the computation of all ballistic tables for the U.S. Army and Air Force. In addition to ballistics, the ENIAC's field of application included weather prediction, atomic energy calculations, cosmic ray studies, thermal ignition, random number studies, wind tunnel design, and other scientific uses."

There are a lot of CW operators out there too. "A lot of ... out there" doesn't seem to be the current criterion, does it? :)

Which is the point I was making - if we eliminate everything we don't actually need for operation, the only things left are the laws and a demonstration that we know how to flip the switch. Which would probably suit the "let's eliminate the code entirely" crowd just fine.

But getting them to operate properly (except for that fiasco of a 2 meter transceiver they put out - the one that doubled as an aircraft transmitter) took at least some little bit of knowledge. It was really something that you could completely align a (then) modern color TV set with nothing more than the parts in the kit (and you could align it almost as well with them as you could with a shop full of test equipment - I checked a few of them), but for most of the ham gear you had to have some idea of how the circuits operated to get them working really well. Not an engineering degree, but a little more than the "theory" on the novice test.

(Granted, if a legally blind person could build a transmitter - K2TCF built his Apache after he lost his visual acuity - and get it working well, the Benton Harbor gang knew what they were doing.)

Either you don't know your history, or you've got some weird definition of "liberal".

For example:

Were JFK and LBJ "liberals"? It was under their administrations that we got the rules changes known as "incentive licensing".

Were Ronald Reagan and George H. W. Bush "liberals"? It was under their administrations that we got:

- FCC exams replaced by VEC exams

- Openly published question pools

- End of Morse Code sending test

- General/Tech written test split in two parts so that Techs did not have same written as Generals

- Medical waivers for 13 and 20 wpm code tests (Bush "asked" FCC for this directly, as a favor to a King that was a ham)

- Technician lost its code test

Is George "Dubya" Bush a "liberal"? Under his administration, we got:

- FCC support for BPL

- ITU treaty changed to eliminate wording requiring code test.

- NPRM proposing complete elimination of code test

Now - are all those folks reducing the requirements "liberals"?

Every major political party claims that.

Well, there really is an organization called the "Log Cabin Republicans":

http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Log_Cabin_Republicans

As for "MORAL VALUES", consider this (quoting Wikipedia):

"...founded Log Cabin Republicans, as a rallying point for Republicans opposed to the Briggs Initiative, which for a time was winning in polls conducted prior to the election with about 61% of voters supporting it while 31% opposed it. It was the first attempt to restrict gay and lesbian rights through a ballot measure.

However, it is historically significant that the polls changed in the opponents favor when former Governor Ronald Reagan, later President.
publicly opposed the measure.

In 1978, for example, Reagan vigorously opposed a California ballot initiative sponsored by religious conservatives that would have barred homosexuals from teaching in the public schools. The timing is significant because he was then preparing to run for president, a race in which he would need the support of conservatives and moderates very uncomfortable with homosexual teachers. As Cannon puts it, Reagan was "well aware that there were those who wanted him to duck the issue"
but nevertheless "chose to state his convictions."

Reagan penned an op-ed against the so-called Briggs Initiative in which he wrote, "Whatever else it is, homosexuality is not a contagious disease like the measles. Prevailing scientific opinion is that an individual's sexuality is determined at a very early age and that a child's teachers do not really influence this." This was a remarkably progressive thing for a politician, especially a conservative one about to run for president, to say in 1978. The Briggs Initiative was overwhelmingly defeated. Its sponsors blamed Reagan for the defeat."

Was Ronald Reagan a Republican?

Naw, ARRL isn't trying to do that. I haven't seen anything in their current goals that would lead me to believe that they are trying to send the rest of our spectrum the way of 11 meters. I may be wrong, but I don't think the FCC would do that again (if any of the current commissioners are students of FCC history that is) even if the ARRL suggested it.

The numbers of Hams out there and how it's been dropping though the more recent years is an alarming trend. With the age of the average ham creeping higher, this hobby is set to all but die out in the USA within a generation unless something changes.

Surely you see the problem that the ARRL is trying to address. You may not agree with their suggested solutions, but you'd have to agree that we have a problem. Right?

You've told us many times why you are here and just as often, you demonstrated that your claim is not factual.

Yes, your true agenda is thinly hidden. You've said you are here for one thing; your posts reveal that you are here for much more.

> ...or "you've had an > interest in ham radio for decades and never got a license"

That's a factual statement, based both upon information from you and the fact that you've not obtained any amateur radio license. You've posted right here for better than a decade. You still have no amateur radio license of any class.

> or "you could have gotten a no-code tech license" or "you

Those are also factual statements. You could have done either. You have not done so.

> ...along with

You send nasty-grams. It comes as no surprise to me that you receive them in response. You are truly an unpleasant man, Len.

> The above have greeted every "reasoned thought" I've > presented in here on ELIMINATION of morse code testing

You aren't owed a silent audience, an adoring audience or even an accepting audience. You have no guaranteed freedom from boos and catcalls. You'll have to accept the right of others to a voice.

> ...and many more quaint > adolescent insults directed to my person.

You've usually received as you've transmitted. If you weren't such a pontificating windbag, your reception might have been more restrained.

> You were one > of those tossing shit. <shrug>

I've greeted some of your ideas with derision. Some have been met with jeers. I've heaved some tomatoes your way too. I have freedom of speech too, Leonard. Get used to that fact. No one owes you respect, agreement or silence. You've maligned the ARRL, individual amateurs, amateur radio as a whole, the Morse test, Morse code use and the work and achievements of those who have disagreed with you in any manner. Now, what do you think I owe you?

> You are an amateur > extra and consider yourself above the rest, are

In amateur radio, I'm vastly superior to you in knowledge, experience and skill. Then again, so is the fellow who got his license last week. You have a problem with anyone being superior to you. You should get used to the fact that in any endeavor, there will be those who are your superiors.

> No problem.

Your response says, "problem".

Would you mind sharing with us what the term "uber-morse" might mean?

> No one here is bound to accept your thoughts, find

One difference between us is that I was already aware of that. With you, it just might be starting to set in.

Well, poor baby, when did "buddy" start being spelled with an "ie". Is it "Jimmie" or "Jimmy"? Tsk, tsk.

I think Jim handles you pretty well. He throws facts in your direction. You stumble over a number of those.

You left out "carrot and stick". Keep boning up on how diplomacy the carrot and stick. Shortly, we and the world community will be going

I use a number of modes in my amateur radio operation. I don't confine myself to a single one. I'm completely human. I'm just not the kind of human who declares that he is interested in something and then lets it lie for decades. I'm not the sort of fellow who boasts that he is going for an "Extra right out of the box" and fails to follow through.

You've been behaving in an unpleasant and discourteous manner to numerous posters to this newsgroup for better than a decade.
You probably should have your membership "canceled" because of that.
I leave it to other IEEE members to decide whether it takes place.

The rest of 'em aren't posting here, Len. There's just you.

Any historical interest in it here seems to have dried up with the copyright?

That's nice. This is all about amateur radio communications.

I have two different sets, with some overlap in sizes. The difference between yours and mine are that mine are used pretty frequently.

That is simply another of your factual errors. Anyone who uses DB connectors, power connectors, holes for rocker switches or meters, can use a set of the punches.

I think you'll find that I'm pretty well up to date on consumer, industrial and computer electronics items as well as the amateur radio market. Is there anything specific, other than the Greenlee product line, that you wish to know more about?

I'm pretty sure that there are no consumer-PROFESSIONALS in HDTV.
No, Len, I'm pointing to the fact that quite a number of others are going to find themselves in the same boat. I have two "locals" but one of them is forty-five miles away near Steubenville, Ohio. The other HD stations are in Athens, Ohio; Pittsburgh and Johnstown, Pennsylvania--a goodly distance away. The only way to see them is to turn the antenna.

Your statements don't indicate speculation. You have no information of the first two. I know for a fact that the third in false because he has stated to me what he does for a living. I'm aware of at least one other who knows what he does for a living. I guess you've been left out of

I've never found it necessary to so limit myself. I was capable of being a professional in electronics and a radio amateur as well. I've have dozens of friends who've managed to do the same.

Yeah, I guess I'd have to walk out to the barn and get another one.

I have hundreds and hundreds of vacuum tubes, Len and if I didn't, there are still quite a number of places selling them.

What's it to you?

That is simply a false statement, Len. It is easily denied if one knows anything about publications available to the radio amateur.

I've had differences of opinion with League policy and League officers and staffers. What is any of that to you. You aren't a radio amateur and you aren't an ARRL member.

> Having a virtual monopoly on radio-amateur-interest

Good boy, Len. If you start with a false premise, you can always make your claim turn out the way you want it to.

> To deny that is to deny the power of marketing > techniques, of psychological propaganda activities that > go on daily in nearly all human activities.

To deny your statement is to point out that your mind is made up about the ways things are and that you aren't going to let fact stand in your way.

Nobody markets more than TV and radio. I can't tell you the last time I drank a soft drink, ate at Applebee's or shopped at Target because of a radio or TV ad. I've never bought a car based upon a magazine ad nor bought a suit because of a newspaper ad. Those virtual monopolies aren't getting their money's worth out of me.

"Maneuver", Len. Your statement doesn't make sense. Don't you like Jim? Are the non-factual statements you issue done to show Jim that you don't like him?

I'm sure it seems that way to a guy who makes a great many factual errors.

You have a rich fantasy life.

What, pray tell, is your view of an individual who is not involved in any way in amateur radio, telling radio amateurs that regulations should be changed (ordering others around, telling them what they "should" do

Do you recall the things you've said about Jim's work? I'm not going to do as you do and turn those words back toward you. You might want to think about what you typically do.

Len never attended a Roman Catholic parochial school. Was never taught by nuns or smacked around by them.

Wasn't worthy of a grade schooler.

First Rule of Comedy: The audience determines what's funny. If the audience doesn't think it's funny, it's not funny.

> > No sweat, senior, we can ALL do that to YOUR posts now.

Len thinks he is either the Pope or royalty. He's all about "rank, status, and privilege".

First Rule of Comedy invoked.

Well, since Len won't describe what "morsemanship" is, here's a working definition:

"Morsemanship" is a collection of skills and knowledge, typically associated with Amateur Radio:

1) Morsemanship includes a working knowledge of the rules and regulations of the Amateur Radio Service, good Amateur operating practices, and adherence to them.

2) Morsemanship includes a working knowledge of the technologies used in the Amateur Radio Service, both old and new.

3) Morsemanship includes the skill to speak clearly, concisely and distinctly, at a steady rate, level and tone, appropriate for radio transmission.

4) Morsemanship includes the skill to listen carefully and understand a transmission in voice or Morse Code under both good and poor conditions.

5) Morsemanship includes the skill to judge radio conditions on a given frequency over a given path, how they are changing, and how to adjust transmissions for best results.

6) Morsemanship includes the skill to recognize the mode of a received signal by ear or other means.

7) Morsemanship includes the skill to properly tune in a signal for best reception.

8) Morsemanship includes the skill to tune up and operate transmitter/antenna systems so as to maximize effectiveness and minimize interference.

9) Morsemanship includes the skill to correctly judge the skills of other operators and adjust transmissions for best results.

10) Morsemanship includes the skill to communicate effectively in less than optimum settings (heat, cold, lack of sleep, etc.) with less than perfect equipment, and under less than optimum radio conditions.

11) Morsemanship includes the skill to use the standard phonetic alphabet, appropriate abbreviations, and prosigns smoothly and effectively, and to judge when their use is needed.

12) Morsemanship includes the skill to write down received transmissions legibly and neatly so that others can easily read them.

13) Morsemanship includes the skill to write clear, coherent formal messages in standard form.

14) Morsemanship includes the skill to type, error free, at a rate that makes best use of the transmission mode.

15) Morsemanship includes the skill to deal with hostile and/or illegally operated stations.

16) Morsemanship includes the skill to do several things at once while on the air.

17) Morsemanship includes the skill to have situational awareness in all operating situations.

18) Morsemanship includes knowledge and skill in the use of Morse Code.

19) Morsemanship includes the knowledge and skill to help other amateurs and prospective amateurs develop their technical and operating skills and knowledge.

20) Morsemanship includes the skill to project a welcoming, friendly and helpful attitude on the air.

Note that "macho morseman" is redundant, like "PIN number", "ATM machine" or "pizza pie".

Len is the kind of person that thinks it's OK to behave one way "PROFESSIONALLY" and another way outside his PROFESSION. I think it's called "compartmentalization". Like the person who can sit in church and act all pious on Sunday, but manages to violate all 10 Commandments the rest of the week.

You know the type.

You misunderstand, Dave. Len means he isn't required to act ethically when he's not working. Compartmentalization.

Len besmirches himself.

His mistakes and errors would almost qualify him to be the Cliff Clavin of rrap. Except that Cliff was funny. Len isn't.

The pro-code arguments seem to be getting sillier and sillier.

I am a know-coder. I enjoy it. CW is my primary mode. I encourage others to join in. I do not believe for one minute that CW is going to save the world. I am not sure the FCC should be requiring it while not testing for the various digital modes or message handling - seems inconsistent

Well, at least I educated you about top posting, and you are almost doing things the correct way now. I suppose that I should begin teaching you and others about TRIMMING your followups in order to make your posts easier to read. It's all there in the news.answers FAQs too, but lots of people haven't read the material.

The full content of all previous posts doesn't need to be quoted, because people have threaded newsreaders and can go back to read earlier posts without your help. Also, you'll save on that precious downloading time of which some of you spoke. People like Len Anderson and Dave Heil really need to learn how to TRIM their followups if they want anyone to read them.

I'll be checking back from time to time to see how you are doing. It looks to me like you're progressing well. There's definitely hope for you, so keep your chin up.

Because there are "mere amateurs" who are making money publishing in the electronics field whereas Lennie is NOT. That's gotta leave a Slow Code you are pathetic. I think everyone on here is starting to realize it. You are the jammer on the local repeater and you get on hf and jam people because you cant have your way with the code requirements. Face it nobody in the world cares what you think about it. You make zero dirrerence in this world. Too chicken to post your call because if you did you know what would happen. You have ruined the newsgroups with your BS and soon you will be in everyones kill file and fade away. Then you will just come up with another name like No Balls or something. My suggestion to everyone is ignore this loser from now on and let him get back to kerchunking repeaters and throwing carriers on people on hf. You know thats the kind of trash he is.

Er, "John," I don't recall you ever posting your call anywhere. I guess it's because if you did, you know what would happen (and only you know, because you haven't told the rest of us about what would happen). Why don't you go first? Pot, kettle, black and all that stuff.

Actually, don't bother. You're probably a no-code tech at best or else don't have a license at all, which would explain your anger with other hams who have higher class licenses. Undoubtedly, we make you feel inferior, and you can't stand the pain of it all.

Oh well; at least you did temporarily learn how to bottom post. Keep on reading news.answers, and keep your chin up. Keep telling yourself
"I'm NOT inferior."

I was licenced in 1967 at the age of 11. Went through incentive licensing and all that then got my 20wpm extra at age 16 so dont preach or talk down ro me. Is it Slow Code or No Balls I get that What's "sexaul stalk", Morkie?

Why do you lie about having three college degrees and can't get through seven words without making idiotic errors?

Aren't you tired of being made a fool of with your OWN words yet, Morkie?

if you want to stop ham radio being dumbed down you need to turn in your license and BAN the use of CW which has made mindless wrecks of people like yourself I presonal don't advocate that course of action but it is the way stop the dumbing down of radio

Nope. No one's been "gone after".

I have, however, tried to hold a mirror up to you to make you realize that you can't make the kinds of sneers and allegations that you do out odf one side of that "mouth" of yours without creating a whole passle of problems with the other side.

My wife has looked over my shou;der before, so yes, she's "here" on occassion.

She initially chided me for 'wasting your time with those idiots" until I showed her how two feced, deceitful and dishonest you and your Feeble Five bretheren are.

OK...So I finally made a typo this WEEK.

Why aren't you chiding Morkie for his THOUSANDS of typos in the last couple of DAYS...?!?!

Uhhhhhh....Brain....You need to learn the difference between the different levels of Nurisng licensure before you stick open that sewerpit of a mouth of yours and PROVE that you're an idiot.

And Brain...No degree is required to achie the title of Nurse in Ohio, either...

Uh huh.

And there YOU are trying to take two words out of context and trying to focus your entire 'argument' around them.

Just like your efforts to belittle the relationship between MARS and Amateur Radio.

The ONLY people in this entire forum that showed you any sympathy for that lame effort were within your Feeble Five circle...

me.

I take full responsiblity for what I say, greaseball.

What I DON'T take responsiblity is for misquotes and out-of-context snippets.

Hurry up now...Mrs Brain has dinner ready, greaseball.

given the fact nothing in the written is go or nogo I don't meind it being there although a great deal of the stuff their realy needs to go (why does anything need to memeroze that frequency with in FS ATV that is Black (or what ever color) there is NO need to know this at all even if you are operating the mode

yes I would pare alot of stuff away from the current written and add other stuff and certain reargange twhat is tested at what in the licenseing structure (I would pull from the tech pool all the question of skip since it is a minor factor at VHF and up ptu these question in

It's consistent with dropping requirements all around. Broadcast stations no longer need licensed personnel on duty (that's been the case for a few decades now), you can repair two-way radios without being licensed and you can operate on the ham bands without having to really pass any test.

funny I seem to recall taking a test and my wife took one a few months ago for her license of course you still can't tell me why it is important to know wether a given circut is a colp[itts or hartley occilator till you can explain what value knowing the name has you can begin to convince me that you went a through a test as realavant as mine

The licensing hierarchy (and the morse code debate) isn't about value, it's about status. It's about having a chip on your shoulder that says "I'm better than you".

Apparently, Rep. Mark Foley is homosexual. And like many homosexual men, he likes young teen boys. We should pray for him that he gets a handle on this problem and refrains from harming any more kids.

Meanwhile, we need to wake up. The fact that this is typical behavior for homosexuals doesn't stop us from continuing to elevate such folks to positions where they gain access to our kids.

1779. RRAP version of Goldylocks bedtime story

From: revfoxweek9@yahoo.com

A very special bedtime story for our friends in RRAP.
I found the original in another NG, but it's perfect for RRAP reading fer sure.

As I used to say on 20 Meters several years ago: "Enjoy, Ya've earned it!!"

---- cut ---- begin . . . . . .

Goldilocks was a pretty, wide-eyed girl with the face of an angel and the brain of a lungfish. Unemployed, stupid, and with Buckley's chance of ever getting a real gig, she spent her days wandering through dark and dreary forests looking for hot action.

There wasn't a lot of hot action to be found those days, so Goldilocks would simply spend a lot of time stumbling around the forest

whacked out of her brain on Valium, Seconal and cheap gin that she'd pinched from her mother's top cupboard, holding one-sided conversations with trees.

But one day, Goldilocks got lucky. She'd stumbled down a path that she'd never seen and was soon in the dankest, darkest, wierdest part of the dankest, darkest, wierdest forest she'd ever stumbled around in.

Before long, she came across a little cottage. It was very pretty, with doors that looked like they were made out of gingerbread, a marshmallow chimney and window boxes made of red strawberry icing.
Goldilocks smiled and laughed as she skipped over to the house.

Well, part of the way to the house -- she was so out of it that she tripped over a non-existent hedgehog and fell flat on her face, tearing her pretty dress from neck to knee, revealing a ripe young body that had not yet had time to fall apart under the influence of her outrageous drug intake.

Picking herself up she staggered to the door, which was not made of gingerbread at all. In fact it was solidly constructed from 2-inch hardwood planks and fitted with an electronic security system.
But, strangely enough, it was open, as Goldilocks found to her surprise when she leaned on it and fell tits first into a stone hallway.

"Shit!" she exclaimed.
The house was silent, so Goldilocks began to explore. She wanted
a drink, but BAD.
In the cupboard over the sink were three gin bottles. One was a big, duty-free 2-litre job.
"Fuck, I'm too off my face to mess with that. I'll drop it for sure," she thought.
Next was a 25ml. miniature of Gordons.
"Farking pissweak..." she mumbled to nobody.
But in the middle was a 750ml. bottle of Tanqeray.
"Shit hot!" she exclaimed, pouring herself three quick tumblers and slamming them down.

Next she decided to look for some smoke. Atop a rather suspiciously damp glass-topped coffee table she saw three pipes.
One was a four-foot Turkish harem hookah with four hoses.
"Too mind-fucking..."
Next was a tiny hash-spotting pipe.
"Too fiddly..."
Last of all was a bong made from an old orange juice bottle with a fat foil bowl packed with purple skunk heads. "Far out!" she said...

After she'd smoked herself beyond the point of human comprehension, she went through the same stupid routine looking for a place to crash. Upstairs she found three beds, the first of which was actually a rack. Another was simply a set of wall chains and manacles, but between them was an antique four-poster number, complete with fluffy pillows and a ceiling mirror.

"Unrool!" she gurgled, before climbing on top. The bed was so comfortable, and she was so ripped, that before long she had drifted into an erotic fantasy and begun to masturbate.
Downstairs the door slammed shut as the Three Bares walked in.

The Three Bares were a hot lesbian strip act who'd moved into the forest a few weeks earlier to escape a charge of lewd and indecent performance in Bangkok.
"Who the fuck left the door open?" demanded the biggest one, Gretel.
"Aw, shit Gretel, I dunno," said Tina, the littlest one. "And I couldn't care less. Let's get a drink. I'm fuckin' fucked."

The medium sized one was already at the cupboard. "Hey, some cunt's been hitting my gin!" she squealed, her tremendous teats quivering

with indignant rage.
"Aw, shut yer fat trap, Kylie. Youse is always crapping on about us gettin into yer grog. Youse don't complain when we get into yer PANTS,
eh?"
"Go fuck yourself..." mumbled Kylie, as she picked up her favourite bong from the coffee table.
"This is getting beyond a farking joke!!" she roared.
"Someone's been at the dope!" and just as she turned to scratch the eyes out of her
"friends" for getting amongst her greens, they all froze...
"Errgle...UMPHHH...oh yeah, yeah, YEAH! Fuck me! Do it to me baby!
Harder! OohhhARRGGH!"
It was Goldilocks bringing herself to a shattering climax upstairs.
"Some slag moll is tossing off up there, and I'll bet she's doing it in MY BED!!" screamed Kylie. The Three Bares ran upstairs, and into the bedroom. Goldilocks was so off her face and so deeply involved in beating her beaver that she didn't see or hear them, and continued pleasuring herself as the Bares stood and watched.

"Cute piece," said Gretel, to nobody in particular, but there was a general nodding of heads.
Kylie's anger had already disappeared, and she had grabbed Tina's hand and was rubbing it across her own breasts. Tina was already breathing heavily, and had begun grinding her clammy thighs together.
"ErrAWWWWW! Please, please yes yes YES! ARRGGH!!!" said Goldilocks.
"Christ, I can't stand much more!" said Gretel, tearing off her tight cut-off denim shorts. "I've gotta get myself some of this!" And with that she hurled herself onto the bed, landing with her face right on top of Goldilocks' hungry gungly bits. Goldilocks didn't miss a beat.

"Err YOW! Oh, no, no, YES YES YES ARRGGHH!!" In seconds Kylie and Tina were in the bed as well, and for the next two hours the whole forest rang with the ecstatic cries of a loin-busting lesbian orgy.
In fact, it still continues to this day, and somewhere in a forest far, far away, there is still a little gingerbread house where lonely nubile young girlies can go for strong drink, good smoke and sexual understanding.

The House Of The Four Bares.

THE END.

To quote Mr Carrot of A.T. who put it quite well elsewhere:

"...When a 40 y.o. heterosexual male hits on a 17 y.o. girl, she tells him to fuck off. But when a 40 y.o. homosexual male hits on a 17 y.o. boy, who has a raging hard-on a couple of hours a day, he shrugs and says 'I'll take the best I can get, and besides, a million Turkish sailors can't all be wrong.'"

Never heard the term "fist" used in this context but it's been a while

More than words, but how much more? I also have to believe that code is slower than speech. Not usually a big issue but an issue none the less.

With todays electronics, size and weight really aren't much of an

I dunno..I guess I like hearing things like gender or a foreign accent to add spice to communication.

Hmm..well..not really a good analogy. Listening to music is only a one way street while both performing music, as well as radio communications, is naturally a two way street.

Not quite sure how, but I'll take your word for it.

Perhaps the typical ages of people who prefer code could be a factor.
It does tend to be considerably older people who prefer code.

Based on the comments, it would seem that the offending poster was referring to something that was unique to Canada. About the only thing I can think of is our medical care system. And THAT'S not really free at all, as I will explain further below.

>For example, is public education of children a government handout? Yes, >homeowners?

Now as for mortgages and home equity loans, the interest is NOT a tax deduction here in Canada. That could be considered a handout that Americans enjoy, something Canadians can't enjoy. Also, Canada is the second highest taxed nation in the world. Renters get a wee bit of a break in some provinces but not here in Alberta, Canada's "Texas".

Oh PuhlEEEZE!!! Spelling Canada with a "K" is a good sound argument?
Calling me a "lazy ass" is a good sound argument? Claiming I get a handout is a good sound argument?

You have NEVER put out ANY kind of argument at all!!! Why don't you try to cite some source that back up any of your "good sound arguments".

Free hint: Hurling insults and innuendo does NOT a "good sound argument" make.

Hope this helps.

Newsflash. Your radio will still work just fine and you will still be able to talk to other hams any way you like. That IS what ham radio is for, after all. Other peoples exam scores will have no effect on your ability to operate your equipment. Are you gonna tell another ham in Berlin than you can't talk to him because Jack Sprat in Iowa got his licence without code? Is your radio experience dependent on some strangers [who you many never talk to] credentials? If so, then your ham license was worthless the day you passed your test.

Both terms are used. Some folks use the term "swing" as well, but that's not exactly a compliment.

Quite a bit, but obviously not as much as a voice. The main point is that skilled operators get more than 'just the words'.

It's a bit similar to the way that one's perception of the written word is affected by the font, punctuation, capitalization, etc. Not exactly the same, but similar.

> I also have to believe that code > is slower than speech. Not usually a big issue but an issue none the > less.

Like many things, "it depends".

The raw speed of the spoken word is obviously faster.

But when you really listen to the way most people speak, the speed is limited by many things. There's a lot of redundancy in the way many people speak, pauses, repeats, "ums" and "ahs', and little phrases tossed in while the person thinks of what to say next. Meanwhile, the skilled Morse Code operator is using abbreviations and other shortcuts that effectively increase the speed way beyond the raw wpm.

For example, the first response in a voice QSO might go like this:

"VE6QRM, victor-echo-six-quebec-romeo-mike, this is N2EY, november-two-echo-yankee, thanks for the call. You're five and nine, five-nine here, good clear signals. I am in Wayne, Pennsylvania, that's Wayne, whiskey-alpha-yankee-november-echo, Pennsylvania, papa-alpha.

while using Morse Code, the same exchange could be:

"VE6QRM DE N2EY TNX CL BT UR 599 599 GUD SIG IN WAYNE PA WAYNE PA BT OP JIM JIM BT HW?...."

Same information, two different modes. If the Morse Code ops are reasonably fast, the time is comparable.

I disagree to a point! Look at the size, weight and performance of HF rigs that you can carry with you. Is there any HF ham rig that's SSB-capable that can compete with the Elecraft KX-1?

For fixed-station use, there isn't much size/weight difference, if any.
But when you need to carry the rig and batteries any real distance, the differences become apparent. This is also when you will find that the difference in low power performance really matters.

Of course. And that's part of the point: different communications

I was thinking of the person who performs the music for themselves vs.
listening to a recording.

Either way, it's still a different experience.

Or consider this analogy: It's one thing to drive a car with all the modern conveniences - power steering, automatic transmission, power brakes, cruise control, climate control, etc., and doing it on a smooth straight highway. It's a different experience to drive a car without all those things, on a winding country road where the driver's skill makes a big difference.

I think it depends on the amateur's situation. I know plenty of hams with small children in the house, or with limited space for a shack, where the sound issue is a big one. Being able to operate quietly can be the difference between operating and not operating.

I disagree - for two reasons!

First I have found amateurs of all ages who are interested in Morse Code. I have found that young people are interested if Morse Code is presented correctly.

Some say that, in the modern world, young people who grew up with cell phones and the internet aren't going to sit still for something like Morse Code - or amateur radio. And many won't.

However, the very fact that Morse Code is unusual is a big attraction to some of them - because it's so different and unusual. They've seen voice comms - they all have cellphones! Typing on a keyboard and reading a screen is something they've seen since they were babies. But

Morse Code is completely different. That's what draws many young people
- just look at the acceptance of the Harry Potter books.

The second reason is that the 'bad behavior' of amateurs on the air doesn't seem to decrease with age. In fact, it may be the opposite!

One of the worst offenders here in the USA was a Californian named Jack Gerritsen (ex-KG6IRO). He was found guilty of multiple repeated offenses, all of which involved on-air behavior like jamming, not 'technical' violations. His bad behavior started on the ham bands but spread to public service bands as well, giving amateur radio a black eye. Enforcement efforts up to revoking his license didn't stop him.
The guy was totally out of control, a real problem case. So now he is going to prison for seven years and has to pay a fairly serious fine ($21,000US, IIRC).

Gerritsen used only voice modes. He is now 70.

I've lost track of who was using the term "handout". I don't think it was you.

I don't know how Canadian public education is funded, but I suspect that it's not that much different than in the USA - at least to the extent that parents don't pay the full amount, nor does the tax level increase with the number of children in school.

Is public education a government handout to people with several children?

Exactly - if one uses the term "handout". A lot of US homeowners would say that they 'deserve' the tax deduction.

I would say that the USA uses tax policy as a form of social engineering. By making mortgage and home-equity interest count as a tax deduction, the government is supporting home ownership over renting.

Really? Who is #1 - Sweden?

One person's handout is another's entitlement.

One more "handout": some (not all) Social Security benefits. Most Americans make payments into Social Security all their working lives.
Some never collect a penny, because they die young.

But if a person receiving Social Security benefits lives long enough, they will eventually receive more in benefits than they paid into the system - including reasonable interest.

Is that a "handout"?

(sigh)

For many years there was a landmark ham tower near here. Custom rotating steel pole, over 100 feet high, with multiple HF Yagis and a full size 2 element 80/75 meter quad. (That's not a typo). All on a typical suburban lot of less than an acre....

It was built by one ham, and when he passed away another one bought the place. But when the second ham passed, the big tower and antennas needed serious work and nobody stepped up to take on the task.

So the tower is all gone and the house is like all the others in the area...

But some things can be preserved - values, skills, culture. Even if the people and places change.

Why will they go "balistic" (maybe you meant "ballistic")?

I can still operate CW on all the freqs I could before, I've picked up some additional phone spectrum on a couple of crowded bands (hopefully in time for SS phone), and all my Novice and Tech (w/Morse test) friends gained a new bunch of HF spectrum.

What's to "bo balistic" about?

DeLorean must have logged into Woger's Google Groups accounts and changed Woger's passwords again. I wonder if Woger will ever find the key logger that the NIM Busters web site installed on Woger's computer?

I don't see any reason to go ballistic.

In theory, yes.

But in practice, how much CW operation actually happens in the US
'phone/image subbands? Practically none that I can hear.

Yup.

Nothing I can see. But there are some other things to consider:

- I don't think FCC will do much with "regulation by bandwidth". This R&O reinforces the basic subbands-by-mode idea, and just moves the dividing line.

- I don't think the FCC will do anything with CTT's "no subbands-by-mode" proposal, for the same reasons.

- The available space for data modes is decreased.

- The foreign 'phones will move even lower in the band, to get away from USA 'phone QRM.

- We'll probably hear more "hi-fi SSB" and AM on 75 meters, because there will be more room for them.

Fine. More room for emcomm.

Invoke your filter and you won't hear much of it.

I like the Alaskan Freq amendment. It lets amateurs try out the freq in drills and tests. In the absense of a code-free HF license, my personal opinion is that ALL licensed amateurs have access to the 5MHz frequencies for emergencies, drills and tests.

Apparently you ARE a wife swapper, just claim not to be interested in mine.

So why is my wife a part of your discussion?

No, that is not the question. I asked if I should be afraid of you. Can you answer a direct question, or are you too much of a sawed-off coward to do so?

You are largely ignored by the pro-code test contingent. They despise

Nope. You only take responsibility for what you >>>MEANT<<< to say, not what you actually said.

Ditto your MARS quote.

But you can't ever confess making a mistake, so you are suck in the Robesin Conundrum of defending the indefensible.

No misquotes, no out of context snippets. YOU provided the full-text

I don't know if we'll get Mad right away but it's clear the FCC and the ARRL want to drive all good hams out of the service. Little by little they'll take away the non-phone portions of the bands and hand it over to the phone users. Like a frog in a pot of water that's raised to boiling point, one day us real hams will find we have to place to communicate on the ham bands that doesn't sound like Citizens Band.

But the written tests have been dumbed down as well. You don't need to

I emailed President Bush he should kick out all the Bill Clinton Liberals in the FCC after he got elected, but he didn't. I can't blame him though because he choose to tackle the terrorist mess Bill Clintoon left the country instead. I feel a lot safer now than I did under Clinton, and the economy is better too.

I just wish all you people would take a stand against dumbing things down any further. If it continues, it going to make hams irrelevant and our bands will sound like CB.

Wrong.

Maybe you should undo your killfilter for a day or two so you can see what the filth in RRAP looks like.

How's your CW practice coming along? Are you going to be a ham soon?

Well if it's not a problem to learn, let's keep the requirement and raise it to 13WPM. It's a bit boring doing code at 5 words per minute, and at 13 WPM you can copy someones call for help almost three times as fast.

I'm sorry Opus, but I refuse to lie. You did get a hand-out, and you're Lazy because you refuse to learn CW to 20wpm, and too lazy to to use it.
You don't want to be a good capable communicator in every way. That's just how it is. I'm sorry if the truth seems like an insult. You're right

While you are being all holier than thou, what did you design and build for your main rig? I'm hoping to be impressed, but expecting to be disappointed.

Did the code help you with the design?

I took my Advanced class test down at 1919 M street 36 years ago. I had to sit at the desk and copy one solid minute out of five error free at 13WPM. I passed it on the first try. I almost failed the sending test, as I had never spent much time doing that. I had never made a code contact before my test, and I have only made a couple since.

The thing about code contacts is they never seem to want to say anything beyond:

WA3XXX DE W6XX RST 5NN WX FB 73 W6XX SK

How does that help the cause of amateur radio?

I have designed and built numerous rf receivers and transmitters, many are employed by the US Army for various uses. I have fixed many different radios from tube stuff through DSP driven affairs.

How exactly did the code help me to do this?

For me code was a means to an end. I wanted my license, so I learned the code.

There were plenty of rude, profane, and generally unpleasant hams on the air back when all had to pass the test in the offices of the FCC. I haven't noticed that things are any worse now. About the only real difference is in the quality of the gear folks are running. It is much better than the crappy stuff that was on the air back in the early 70's.

Name one real/valid/probable scenario for this. Let me guess, you crash land on the moon, have only a D-cell battery, some wire, a butter knife, happen to find some crystals, some silicon, somehow beyond your knowledge or abilities, manage to build a transmitter, and send your SOS back to Earth. Is that about right? Nah, you'd die trying to make it iambic.

Right now, CB is totally dead. Nothing. Nada. Zip. Zilch.

Behavior like yours will push ham that way too. Who wants to be associated with the likes of you?

1849. Typo?

I think there's a typo in FCC 06-149

97.301 says where we can operate. It does not say which modes (emission types) - that is specified in 97.305.

97.301(b) is for Extras, 97.301(c) is for Advanceds, 97.301(d) is for Generals and 97.301(e) is for code-tested Techs and Novices.

In these actions, FCC modifies all the above paragraphs.

The division point between "80m" and "75m" moves to 3.6 MHz from 3.750. This effectively allows 'phone and image from 3.60 to 4.0, because all of "75m" is allowed 'phone and image.

I don't know why FCC treats "80m" and "75m" as if they were two isolated bands, but they do. No other amateur band gets that treatment.

Extras have 3.5 to 4.0, same as before, the dividing line just moves to 3.60.

Advanceds have 3.525 to 3.60 and 3.70 to 4.0 There is no mention of Advanceds being able to operate on 3.60 to 3.70! Advanceds gain 3.70 to 3.775, but lose 3.60 to 3.70

I think there is a typo in the FCC document in the General privileges 97.301(d). It states that Generals would have 3.525 to 3.725 on "80m", which doesn't agree with the previously-stated dividing line between "80m" and "75m". In all other paragraphs, "80m" is specified as stopping at 3.60. Also, Advanceds do not have 3.60 to 3.70 under the new rules.

If this really is a typo on FCC's part, it means that Generals will not have 3.60 to 3.750, which they have today.

Confused? Get a copy of "old" Part 97 and splice in the new parts to 97.301. See what the new rules will actually say.

You are in violation of the Blogspot terms of service, which read in part:

"You agree to not use the Service to: (a) upload, post or otherwise transmit any Content that is unlawful, harmful, threatening, abusive, harassing, tortious, defamatory, vulgar, obscene, libelous, invasive of another's privacy, hateful, or racially, ethnically or otherwise objectionable; (b) harm minors in any way;"

Certainly the pictures are vulgar and objectionable to most viewers, and they are possibly intended to harass your perceived enemies.

But you know all about Terms of Service by now, don't you? They've been used to boot you from a couple of ISPs. You're a master at getting tripped up by ToS violations, because you never even think about them before you act.

Top posting makes this very confusing.

However, I am convinced that nobody in industry or at the FCC cares about anything other than optimizing short-term revenue. The notion of optimizing spectrum use for the greatest good went out with the Carter administration.
This is one of the greatest tragedies of our time in my opinion.

To be obscene it must be these three things:

Whether the average person, applying contemporary community standards, would find that the work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest,

Whether the work depicts/describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct or excretory functions [1] specifically defined by applicable state law,

Whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value.

and before you say anything, this applies to everyone...not just the government. Secondly if you don't like what on my website then don't go there...it that simple. But then again a stupid fuck like yourself would understand that, would they....and good luck, bloggers is owned by googles....you have a better chance getting a responds from the wall then googles.

esp when it is likely that somebody could check normaly one can verify enrolement with a name and I think it would show flunked out of RN school

OTOH in Michigan at least I (or anyone) coul;d complete a corespondence course that would one to test for the LPN license no hands on practical requirement for the license

When you sit down at a VE test session the number of questions you have to answer over-all to be a Tech, General, or Extra class is less than it used to be and that's not including the questions lost when CW was dumbed down.

KKKanadian licenses are all hand-outs now, just like your health care system, but that's not your fault and I don't blame you for it. Still, if you want to be a real ham you might want to get your code speed up so you can communicate with other real hams. We'd love communicating with ya.

It's clear the FCC and the ARRL want to drive out all good hams from the service. Little by little they'll take away the non-phone portions of the bands and hand it over to the appliance operators. Like a frog in a pot of water that is raised to boiling point, one day us real hams will find we have no place to communicate on the ham bands that doesn't sound like CB. Apparently, I'm the only one seeing it coming. A ham who will stand for nothing will sit for anything.

First off dumbfuck, my mom don't have 8 track and records I do.....and yeah bitch I'm that old...and if you love Hate the FCC rant (after all we know the FCC are all a bunch of FUCKING lying scum bags) I'll be more then happy then to flood this USENET with anti FCC Shit. As for Omega one radio, we are very happy on FM..that way your little gay boyfriends DeWhorean, Roger "I'm a bastard child" and Steve "I jack off over dead daughters grave" Robbieson can't harass or jam my signal

When being overwhelmed by logic and reason: k00ksuit!
If you are going to be wrong, do it at the top of your lungs.
When caught in a lie: LIE!
When in doubt: Order the Crab Won Ton
Plagiarism is your friend. Use it.
Whenever contradicted; morph, start calling people names, and make false accusations. Include the children of your target in your allegations, even if they don't have any.
(06-Jun-05) When nobody else will listen, post to your own fan group.
(06-Jun-05) Obviously, since you have your own fan group, this must mean that you have fans. Post prolifically to your fan group - you wouldn't want to disappoint them!

(10-May-2005)Everyone reads usenet. Approval here means approval everywhere.
Post numerous blank posts, or posts containing only a message id.
Post numerous copy&paste web articles from crackerpot websites.
Never forget to call kookologists "k00ks."
If there are several, call them "sockpuppets" too
When all else fails, accuse various and sundry kookologists of e-mailing viruses to you. This is a sure-fire method of garnering sympathy and ensuring that the General Public will always see things your way. An especially effective sub-strategy here is to accuse them of infecting you with the 'Sasser' worm via e-mail.
Quote notorious scientists or writers - it makes it look as if they approve the drivel you are writing!

Be vigilant in your redundancy. The more you repeat yourself, the more likely others will believe you!
If you can't find anyone as crazy as yourself to support you in the flamewars you start with the normal population, create sock puppets and use anonymous remailers that shamelessly hang on every word you write.
(17-Mar-05) When dealing with law enforcement, remember that it is they who have the problem, not you. Oh, easily. 25 years ago, technical conversations were dominated by such earth shatteringly important stuff as having a ham down at the repeater site helping other hams tune their transmitters to be on frequency. Other wonderkind were hitting the repeater with a full quieting signal, and turning their power up to try and get a better signal to that DX mobile that breaking up.

If it wasn't that, it was an endless sea of autopatches calling the xyl to tell her that traffic was bad, could she start dinner... or ordering pizza.

> Me? I hear no-codes and nickle extras arguing how long a half wave dipole

I heard the same things 25 years ago from Generals that got their licenses at the offices of the FCC.

Even 34 years ago, there were study guides that had questions from the pool used by the FCC. If you could memorize the answers to those questions, you were virtually assured of passing. I used the ARRL handbook as my guide.

You didn't answer my questions about the home brew rig you are using.

As if data modes were being crowded anyhow! The few users are clustered around a couple of frequencies, like small watering holes on the Sonoran desert, talking to pretty much nobody except the few other lonesome prospectors. As a measure of how little attention is paid to this, I haven't heard a single complaint about the fact that the 75m "automatic" data freqs are now smak-dab in the middle of the proposed 80m Extra phone band! Nobody even noticed!

Why are you so against freedom of choice? There's an article in Worldradio about how ham radio saved a guy's life. I guess FM saving someone's life doesn't count with you, huh?

"Slow Code" does not know what code speed "Opus" can do. He simply assumes.

Note that we do not know "Slow Code's" code speed, either.

Opus, you are making a simple but common logical mistake: You are taking "Slow Code" seriously.

Why? There is nothing there that is harmful to CW in the least. As a matter of fact, it encourages more CW use now that the Novices and Tech+ folks will be able to mingle and join the main CW activities.

Well, actually there is.

At present, 3500 to 3750 kHz is CW/data space - no 'phone or image. In that space, 3525 to 3750 is available to Generals, Advanceds and Extras. 3500-3525 is for Extras only.

When the changes take effect, only 3500-3600 will be free of 'phone. The space available for data modes will be reduced from 250 kHz to 100 kHz for Extras, and from 225 to 75 kHz for Advanceds and Generals.

Now it may come to pass that 3600-3750 is still used for CW by some Extras and Advanceds. But I think it is far more likely that those freqs will be used for 'phone, with CW being frowned upon. And they cannot be used for data.

True. The USMC Imposter has gone after my wife, insulted my parents, insulted my wife's universities, insulted just about anything I've mentioned in here. Imposter then says
"I lie" since he doesn't know right from wrong.

>I obviously don't care for your tactics involving peoples families in >your problems.

Imposter has so many problems he needs all the "care"
he can get.

>No, you've made tons of typo's this week. This typo was made as your >were calling someone stupid. If you're going to call someone stupid, Brian, it matters not.

1. Imposter was long ago divorced from reality and knowledge of right and wrong.

2. As a result of (1) he usually looks like an idiot.

3. (1) and (2) repeated endlessly until his Google message total exceeds that of Cecil Moore.

>Nope. One day some university is going to get a couple hundred Imposter is traveling to Amish country of Pennsylvania?

Imposter is going to NJ to learn methods of offing patients from a nurse there who did it?

Must be fear.

They can't control him, one of their OWN.

>What you posted is plain for anyone to see.

Thousands of posts worth of insults and failure to discern right from wrong...not to mention the infamous IMPOSTER of the USMC act carried on for years...years in which the Imposter NEVER supplied a single item of proof, not even a snapshot of himself on "active duty" during 18 years.

>Is Paul going to let you play "Excrement Commando" in RRAP?

Probably he will. Amateur extras will have all sorts of "permissions" versus ordinary folk in the "moderation" period. Those who disagree with amateur extras will never have their posts shown in public.

>Robesin Conundrum of defending the indefensible.

That happened years and years ago. Imposter has never been able to rise out of his ooze.

>What has my wife got to do with your problem, creep?

His own (SECOND) wife can't control his 5-hour sessions on his computer while he is busy shoveling shit on his "enemies."

A real head case he is...

Well yes that segment has been shortened a bit but on the whole, the changes should be beneficial. I particularly like the Novice/Tech+ getting more CW bandwidth.

ERROR on "correction," Jimmie.

That's a 2002 ad-promo, four years OLD.

A click on the link for more data turns up blank with the small advisory of no suppliers for this item. :-)

Search all you want of the HP, Dell, Compaq, the independents such as PC Club...or the big warehouse suppliers such as CDC or Frys. You won't find any with vacuum tubes in them on the market this year or the year before.

Now try to be a MAN, Jimmie, acknowledge your failure to followup on the one-time "deal" of a single audio output tube in a single specialty personal computer.

>So what? It's only been 60 years since ENIAC was announced...

Tsk. You've been around for a decade less and your THINKING is obsolete and self-centered.

BTW, what did ENIAC have to do with AMATEUR RADIO?

Anything at all?

ENIAC and the amateur code test deserve a place in MUSEUMS, not the reality of life in today's world.

Please direct any more hero worship of ENIAC to the ACM historian. You DO have an ACM membership, don't you?

A comparison between a poor speaker and a skilled radiotelegrapher is worthy HOW? To shine up the "skilled radiotelegrapher?" [of course...]

Compare a good speaker and a poor, unskilled radio-telegrapher's sending and speech becomes way, way faster.

AN/PRC-104...back-pack HF SSB transceiver, operational since 1984. Built by (then) Hughes Aircraft Ground Systems (Hughes purchased by Raytheon).

For civilian-only, try the SGC 2020 SSB HF transceiver
used by private boat owners as well as hams.

The PRC-104 has an integral automatic antenna matching package (to the right of the transceiver itself). This insures that the manpack set's whip antenna is always tuned for optimum radiated transmission power.

SGC has several antenna autotuner models available;
separate equipments.

You have much experience on "winding country roads?" :-)

[of course you do, you are an amateur extra morseman...]

Are you advocating "no-frills" personal vehicles? Why?

I learned to drive in a 1939 Ford, NO automatic transmission, NO power steering, NO power brakes, No cruise control, NO "climate control" other than the standard heater. Training ground was an abandoned army camp, one which DID have a few "winding (dirt) roads." If you think for one minute that I would give up a nice, comfortable, well-equipped 2005 Chevy Malibu MAXX just to "rough it" for SOMEONE ELSE'S IDEA of what constitutes "good driving," you've got your head up your ass.

Having earned my Army driving license, I will personally challenge you to a Jeep gymkhana (Jeep circa 1940s-1960s) at everything from "smooth straight highways" through "winding country roads" on to OFF-ROAD ANYTHING. I will WIN. Been there, did that, got T-shirts, etc.

That standard issue Jeep had NO amenities except for the post-1950 winch and cable over the front bumper. "Climate control" was whatever the climate was outside. The "power transmission" was a couple gear shifts operated by arm strength and experienced clutch operation. Ptui.

HOW MANY personal vehicles have YOU DESIGNED and BUILT?
Include auto kits if you need to.

HOW MANY thousands of miles have YOU driven? Over "winding country roads?" [I don't think so unless you count the old driveway to the Doylestown Barn Cinema...] I've driven the VERY winding country road (rough surface) to a Wyoming working ranch (cattle brand registered in Wyoming is "B-1 Bomber") from/to highway.

One in three Americans has a cell phone. Census Bureau said so in a public statement in 2004.

Back in the late 1940s - a time well before cell phones, personal computers, with (mostly) only sound broadcasting - there was NO great "novelty" or "interest" in morse code communications. Been there, seen that, see no difference now.

Preservation of the Past is the job of MUSEUMS.

Why do you insist on keeping a "living museum" in amateur radio through federal license testing for morse code in only AMATEUR radio?

YOU had to test for it so everyone else has to...

Fraternal order HAZING having NO tangible value

Lutherans don't go to parochial schools, Jimmie. :-) Jimmie ever nail some theses to church doors? :-)

Jimmie NEVER served in any military, not even as chaplain.
Not even as Charlie Chaplin.

Jimmie is "expert" in show business?!?

Jimmie can come out west and tell Mitzi Shore how to run

Jimmie have SAG card? SEG card? AFTRA card?

You can try, but it will be in ERROR as your usual failure to recognize that others don't think like you do.

A MORSEMAN lives, breathes, eats morse code as the main topic of his/her life.

A MORSEMAN wants to freeze time back in the 1930s when code was king of small station communications.

A typical MORSEMAN has the callsign K4YZ, N2EY, or K8MN but those are otherwise indistinguishable from one another.

Anonymous MORSEMEN are represented by "Slow Code" and his general angry attitude towards anyone not worshipping him.

As always to you, ByteBrothers famous phrase invoked.

On 80m they used to have 50kHz pretty much to themselves. (Of course you could have dropped a bucket of grenades on 3675-3725 and never touched a single Novice or Tech 99% of the time.)

Now they'll have 75kHz on 80m, (a whopping increase of 25kHz) and they'll have to share it with a host of pissed-off displaced traffic nets, RTTY/data operators, all the other Generals who were already there, probably some displaced Canadian phone nets, and the W1AW bulldozer. What few who migrate down there (I deem it less than 2 dozen anyhow) may not share your "particular like" for the move.

Imagine this. Imagine all the CW and digital NTS traffic nets that now operate in the 150KHz between 3600 and 3750, relocated down to the 75KHz between 3525 and 3600. Imagine all the PSK and RTTY operators also relocated down there. Imagine the Canadian SSB nets migrating down there to avoid the US extras and Advanced. Imagine the folks already operating there welcoming them with open arms --- NOT!. Then imagine it is a domestic contest weekend, like SS or FD!

What could be the harm to CW?

Sure it is. I asked it.

You don't seem to be able to make an adequate self-determination

That's only a question that you can answer yourself. I can't answer it for you. I don't know (nor do I care) what scares you and what doesn't.

Personally, there's not a whole lot that scares me. Certainly nothing that you or your Feeble Five bretheren could muster up, even if you were all able to show up at my house simultaneously.

There's nothing cowardly about me not being able to answer a question that is not for ME to answer. It's for YOU to answer as to whether you should be afraid of ANYthing...

I pretty much figure you for a Don Knotts type. Backfiring dump trucks probably give yo cause to hit the deck.

2002 is certainly "relatively modern" compared to 1946.

You made a mistake, Len.

You specified "relatively modern", not "current production".

2002 is "relatively modern" compared to 1946. And that system was

So what? You specified "relatively modern", not "current production".
2002 is "relatively modern" compared to 1946. And that system was brand-new in 2002.

You cannot change the criteria after the fact.

You mean, like someone who doesn't want the zoning in their

the very early 1960s to be enshrined forever in his neighborhood?

Like someone who wants to stop development of land he does not own?

Why deal with second handers when the real stuff is out there?

Did you finish reading the US Army historical monograph I linked to?

Here are the links again:

Electronic Computers Within the Ordnance Corps

Historical Monograph from 1961

That's the real stuff, straight from the Army. Covers not only ENIAC but its successors. Read what the US Army Historical Officer wrote in the official US Army documents.

The "Tree of Computing" sums it up nicely.

btw, the "Ordnance Corps" are the nice folks who take care of things like how to do artillery barrages....

Still no problem for the CW ops. They can operate the entire band. This may be the band where they choose not to limit themselves to the traditional CW portion.

Besides that, generally the only time the CW ops go as high as 3.600 is during a contest. Typically they stay between 3.500 and 3.550. So looking at the current ARRL band plan, they digital guys may end up moving down a bit but probably not clear down to the 3.550 but more likely to perhaps 3.560. Still though it may be the digital guys who feel a bit pinched. So while the CW ops probably will not go ballistic, the digital ops might.

By the way, the Canadian phone nets will not need to move.

CW ops can carry on as before since that is legal in all parts of the band.
They may now choose to spread out a bit instead of staying in the traditional area.

Same with the NTS CW traffic nets.

It will be the digital guys who feel cramped.

Sweepstakes (voice) and FD only occur once a year each so not a significan issue. Besides that, FD is all modes so the bands get nearly full top to bottom anyway.

On the other hand, all it takes is one Taylorville resident to put up a low power FM transmitter, and I know people in your area who would be willing to do that for me. Like me, they belong to the Illuminati, and most of them will gladly help me out.

Don't press your luck. Luck, plus being an insignificant small fry, is the only thing that has kept you out of court.

Luck apparently ran out for Roger this week. Some skinheads he is supposed to have insulted on a web board somewhere are rumored to have paid him a visit a few days ago. Don't make the same mistake he did and mouth off at people you don't really know. Some of them might be violent.

In a sense the 3600Khz "band edge" simply "aligns" the traditional 80M CW operating space with those spaces on 40 & 20. Both of which are ~100Khz wide as will be the case on 80. The sky never fell on 40 and 20
CW and it won't fall on 80 CW either.

Why don't you take your "skinheads" along with your bravado and go find yourselves some raghead Islamo-facists to rough up. You would have a "field day" in Detroit. You would likely make it on CNN.

As others here have pointed out, the current cw/rtty/data 225kHz segment between 3525-3750 is being compressed to just 75kHz between 3525-3600. That's a 3:1 compression ratio.

Now before you start your chant about "CW can transmit anywhere", consider that this R&O puts 25% of the 75/80m band in the exclusive hands of Extras and another 20% in the exclusive hands of Extra/Advanced. So almost half of the band isn't available under any mode to Generals. As Iitoi pointed out, 80m CW has long been a hotbed of public service and traffic handling nets (which depend on Generals for manpower) --- good luck on this one now!

I disagree with that opinion. And if it turns out that way, there is recourse. Besides, the Code Test issue is moments away from being resolved. The value of this forum is tied to that single issue.
Paul's moderation will, like the code exam, become an unnecessary

Apples and cumquats, Brian. Do ALL the math.....

80m 3.5-3.6 CW/rtty/data = 100kc
40m 7.0-7.125 CW/rtty/data = 125kc
20m 14.0-14.15 CW/rtty/data = 150kc

The raw numbers don't mean a thing without taking into account the other differences in the three bands. Specifically the differences in the volume of activity per Khz per hour. Doesn't take much tuning around the lower 100 Khz of each of the three bands to come to the conclusion that the overall levels of activity on 40 & 20 are some multiples of the level of activity on 80 and it's been that way since before Hector was a pup. For the most part 80 is a great place to indulge in pleasant in-country ragchews because there's seldom any DX cw, DX SSB or foreign broadcast activity audible on 80 vs. all the QRM 40 & 20

So on this basis I'll stick: The little amount of 80M CW and data activity which is found now above 3.600 will easily fit below 3.600 if they chose to move and they'll still have more "elbow room" than we've ever had on 40 & 20.

And no I'm not bleeding for the CW traffic nets either, they lost their relevance on VJ day.

Only under Jimmie's whiny little REdefinition of the word "mistake." :-)

The original IBM PC that debuted in 1980 (26 years ago) did NOT have any vacuum tubes in it. Neither did any subsequent IBM PC...right on up to the total emptying of IBM's Boca Raton, FL, PC operations.

Did IBM ever produce any AMATEUR RADIO products?

No? Then why do you go on and on and on and on about this niche subject and the "glory" that was ENIAC? Did ENIAC ever serve AMATEUR RADIO in any way?

If you look back at personal computing, you will NOT find any vacuum tubes used in them...except in your absolute world a couple of short-lived PC systems that incorporated a CRT (a vacuum tube) into the PC package. [CP/M OS systems using an 8080 or Z80 CPU]

The original Apple (6502 processor based) didn't use vacuum tubes. The original Apple Macintosh packaged a CRT into the Mac's box since it brought out the icon-based GUI display that was possible only with CRTs at that time. Did ANY of the Apple computers use a vacuum tube for SOUND output? No?

Look to the earlier personal computers such as the Commodore, Atari, Sinclair, etc., etc., etc. NONE had any vacuum tubes in them for SOUND output. NONE of the pocket calculators had vacuum tubes. Some of the earlier desktop calculators had GAS displays for alphanumerics; HP and Tektronix both had PCs with incorporated CRTs (in which the very earliest models had some vacuum tubes for the CRT HV supply circuits). NONE had any tubes for SOUND output.

There's a niche area of guitarists who prefer tubes for the particular "warm sound" (distorted) they associate with over-driving amplifiers. That "tube sound" MYTH has been 'over-driven' to the point of nausea, about like the "gold-coated speaker cable" myth that is claimed to produce "golden sound" from music amplifiers. :-) Tube amps and gold-coated "monster cable" is a triumph of Public Relations bullshit warping the minds of the buying public. Not unlike the mythos of morse that was CREATED in earlier radio. :-)

That ONE system was DEFUNCT before 2005. :-)

Go back to the personal computer bellweather year of 1980. Any of those personal computers on the market use vacuum tubes? No?

26 years ago is NOT "current production" nor is it hardly "relatively modern." :-)

Your whining, foot stamping, and crying out "mistake!
mistake!" about a SINGLE exception in the millions upon millions of personal computers based on the original IBM architecture PC of 26 years ago is a lot of your bullshit, Jimmie. That your SINGLE exception went DEFUNCT after a year on the market only proves that you are a whiny, foot-stamping, cryer who is bound and determined to attempt humiliation of anyone disagreeing with you. You've proved that activity for years in here. :-)

"Non-amateur-radio subjects?" Like ENIAC? An early mainframe computer that was really a programmable calculator? :-)

Name them. :-)

Did they become hams JUST to work on ENIAC?

How was ENIAC used in RADIO?

>You did not work on ENIAC and have never been a ham....

I've never claimed to... :-) However, I was alive in 1946 and you were not. :-)

YOU never worked on ENIAC. You've never claimed to have worked on ANY computer, main-frame, minicomputer, nor personal computer.

Are you a member of the ACM? [Association for Computing Machinery, the first and still-existing professional association for computing and information technology] I was a voting member of the ACM for a few years.

Jimmie is NOT a military veteran. Jimmie can never be a military veteran. Jimmie has never done anything on computers except to operate personal computers in endless tirades against no-coders.

>> ENIAC and the amateur code test deserve a place in >> MUSEUMS, not the reality of life in today's world.
>In your opinion.

...yes, an OPINION shared by thousands and thousands and thousands of others.

As of 2004 the US Census Bureau stated that 1 out of 5 Americans had SOME access to the Internet. That involves access via a personal computer (or its cousin, the "workstation"). That is roughly 50 to 60 MILLION Americans.

The original (and only) ENIAC used an architecture that is NOT common to present-day personal computers. About the only term that IS common is that ENIAC used "digital circuits." That's about the end of it for commonality with MILLIONS and MILLIONS of personal computers in the daily use worldwide.

The ONLY radio service in the USA still requiring tested morse code skill to permit operation below 30 MHz is the AMATEUR radio service. ALL of the other radio services have either dropped morse code for communications or never considered it when that radio service was formed. There is NO wired or wireless communications service in the USA that uses manual telegraphy means today. Defunct. Kaput.

>> Please direct any more hero worship of ENIAC to the >> ACM historian.
>Why deal with second handers when the real stuff is out there?

"Real stuff?!?" ENIAC is a MUSEUM PIECE, Jimmie. It is NOT "real stuff" except in your mind. It serves ONLY the Moore School of Engineering as an EXHIBIT for PR purposes. It is a dinosaur. Defunct. Kaput.

>Did you finish reading the US Army historical monograph I linked to?

No. I rank that along with some "US Army historical" things that described George Armstrong Custer as a "hero" of the June 1876 Battle of the Little Big Horn. Some "hero." A loose cannon who was LAST in his West Point class, a poor tactician who made a tragic, fatal mistake for the 7th Cavalry. Thank you, but NO, I'd rather read the NON-PR historical references that described things as the REALLY were without the orgasmic after-glow of hero worship.

ENIAC never saw battle, Jimmie. It was never close to the battlefields like the Brit's Colossus nor did it "solve ciphers" (decryption) like Colossus did. The US military DOES have fielded computers (plural) and systems which ARE useable today and ARE in use. You can read about those if you wish...but you won't since none of them are directly related to ENIAC.

Indeed, NONE of today's computers are related to ENIAC any more than WE are "related" to some proto-humans of Africa.

>btw, the "Ordnance Corps" are the nice folks who take care of things >like how to do artillery barrages....

No, Jimmie Noserve, the "ordnance" folks maintain the ammunition and weaponry. The ARTILLERY folks do the actual laying-in and firing. Really. Had you ever served in the military (you didn't) you would be informed of that.
In the US Army, the "line" (those who are the most involved with actual battle) units are INFANTRY, ARTILLERY, and ARMOR. All other units exist to serve them.

As ever to you, the ByteBrothers famous phrase is invoked.

He doesn't know right from wrong.

If we say he rightly violates reality (he does), he turns right around and says we do that. It is a non-argument. All it does is delude him in his non-justification of his actions.

His behavior is a syndrome of someone who will shortly fall into certifiable insanity.

There are several but all inter-related. With the Imposter everything boils down to him always saying he is "right" which then "justifies" (in his mind) all of his insults of others. Everything then becomes a very "personal" battle with him. The subject of a thread is tossed aside in his tirades and he focusses sharply on "battling" his opponents.

At best that "recourse" would be NOT posting and NOT accessing the newsgroup. There is NO sign that anyone "in charge" today or the last few years has done anything in regards to "offensive" postings. There is a curious, prolonged NON-response in Google whenever anyone clicks on their message option button.

Might not even be done this year. The R&O on the "omnibus" issue began in 2004 and didn't get settled until 2006. The code test NPRM of last year (05-235) might be handled in 2007.

Good reason to upgrade then. After reading the various FCC items, it looks like they really want people to upgrade clear to the top license anyway.

Nope. You made a mistake, pure and simple. That is, unless you deliberately wrote an untruth with the intent to deceive, in which case it was a lie.

The display that came with it had a CRT. The portable IBM PC, with built-in display, had a CRT as well.

But you didn't ask about the "IBM PC"

You wrote that you "can't find ANY relatively modern computer" with vacuum tubes.

Not just IBM PCs, but "ANY relatively modern computer".

To prove a point, Len: That a thing can be practical in its time even if it is considered impractical in other times, and even if it is never repeated.

That's true whether the device is ENIAC, Fessenden's early AM voice work with modulated alternators, or something completely different.

I proved my point. You are now trying to misdirect, rather than admit you were flat-out wrong.

The computer I referenced used a vacuum tube. The portable IBM PC used a CRT, too.

You didn't ask about the "original Apple"

You wrote that you "can't find ANY relatively modern computer" with vacuum tubes.

Not just Apples, but "ANY relatively modern computer".

You are confusing audiophools with audiophiles.

By whom?

As I have shown, voice radio was practical as early was 1906, and in regular use for broadcasting by 1921. Yet Morse Code on radio was used by many radio services for many more decades after 1921. The use of Morse Code by the US Coast Guard and the maritime radio services lasted well into the 1990s. That's more than 90 years after Fessenden's voice transmissions, and more than 75 vears after 1921.

Morse Code is still in wide use in Amateur Radio today - almost 100 years after Fessenden.

It wasn't "mythos" that kept Morse Code in use.

Gee, Len, you're the one carrying on like an overtired two-year-old.
I'm calm, cool and collected. Not whining, foot stamping, or crying out anything. I'm just correcting your mistakes with facts.

Basic Logic 101, Len: If you make an absolute statement that something never happens, does not exist, or always happens, and someone provides one or more exceptions, your statement is proved false. That's all there is to it. Doesn't matter if there is just one exception or many, the absolute statement is proved false - invalid - a mistake - if there is an exception.

> That your SINGLE exception went

It seems that you consider any correction of your mistakes to be a humiliation. Why is that?

Yet when it came time to express that opinion to FCC, there were more who held the opinion that the Morse Code test should remain as a requirement for at least some US amateur radio licenses.

Do you believe in democracy, Len? The majority of those who expressed an opinion on the Morse Code test to FCC want at least some Morse Code testing to remain.

Are you sure?

And even if it's true - so what? That's not amateur radio.

Yes - like this:

CHAPTER II -- ENIAC

The World's First Electronic Automatic Computer"

http://ftp.arl.mil/~mike/comphist/61ordnance/chap2.html

> ENIAC is a MUSEUM PIECE,

Now it is. But for almost a decade it was used by the US Army for a wide variety of calculations. And it was the root of the Tree of Computing.

Didn't you read the monograph?

It's real, Len. A part of it still works, too.

Custer had nothing to do with ENIAC.

And if you didn't read the monograph, how do you know what it says?

I think you're afraid of reading a history that disproves your cherished opinions and biases, Len. The facts presented in the monograph are too upsetting to you for you to even read them.

They're all directly related to ENIAC because they are its descendants.

What phrase is that, Len?

"Klaatu barada necto"?

"All your base are belong to us"?

"Shut the hell up, you little USMC feldwebel"?

Which phrase is it?

Not really. Based on everything that I have read, the object of having a series of license classes was so that people could take the journey in smaller, more manageable steps. It does not seem like it was intended that people would only go part way and say "good enough".

I have recently elmered a woman to her Extra class license. She had no technical background and little to no experience in amateur radio even though she had a license (she never really got active). She passed with flying colors. So any one can do it if they so choose. By the way she is now quite active in the club, is getting on the air, and she will be joining me to participate in the November Sweeps. While we will try for the Clean Sweep, our main goal is to get all states so she can apply for WAS.

A couple of Morse-code-skilled radio amateurs were on Leno a while back. They made mincemeat of the world champion text messager.

Those cards are effectively union membership cards, even if the unions call themselves "guilds".
Liberals love unions. Are you a liberal, Len? Sure seems like it.

Then why did you tell another citizen:

Recently you said you wanted rrap to be shut down for an indefinite length of time. Is that the action of someone who really believes that all should be heard?

Listen to the way most people speak, Len. There's a lot of redundancy in the way many people speak, pauses, repeats, "ums" and "ahs', and little phrases tossed in while the person thinks of what to say next.

So? Most people don't speak like they're reading a script.

Let's see...

The AN/PRC-104 weighs at least 14 pounds, according to the literature.
Some writeups say as much as 28 pounds. It's a pretty big set - you don't just slip it in a pocket.

How much do the batteries weigh? How long will the set will run on one set of batteries?

Battery voltage is nominally 24 volts, and the thing draws about 350 mA on receive. So you can't just hook it to a 12 volts source, and the power consumption on receive is about 8 watts.

Now the biggie: How much does one cost new? I found some for $2500 - reconditioned.

> For civilian-only, try the SGC 2020 SSB HF transceiver
> used by private boat owners as well as hams.

Weighs 8 pounds without batteries. Not as big as a PRC-104 but still a lot bigger than a KX-1. Draws over 300 mA on receive, but runs on 12 volts. Costs $800 new, last time I looked. Tuner and such are extra.

The KX-1 weighs under a pound and is much smaller and lighter. Receive current is less than 50 mA. Costs $299 new.

So the rigs that "compete" with the KX-1 cost a lot more money (twice to ten times the price or more), are far larger and heavier (8 to 20 times the weight or more), and the battery life is much less.

Thanks for proving my point, Len.

The KX1 can be equipped with an ATU. Costs a lot less, weighs a lot less, takes up a lot less space.

All weigh more, use more power, cost more money.

Why would you give up a nice, comfortable, well-equipped 2005 Chevy Malibu MAXX just to "rough it", Len?

Maybe. Maybe not. You don't really know, you're just bragging because you know it won't happen.

That doesn't mean you would win.

What's your point - that you spit at Jeeps?

What does it matter? I could tell you about the time I took two junker cars and made one good one out of them, but you'd find fault with that, somehow.

Gosh, Len, I don't really know. Probably more than you, though.

Enough.

What does that have to do with anything, Len?

"Amateur" is derived from the Latin word for "love". Means to do something for the love of the thing alone. Emotional reasons, IOW.

The fact is that there are plenty of young people who like Morse Code and learn it readily. I think that's one reason you want an age limit for an amateur radio license - so those code-skilled young folks can't get a license until they're 14.

So what?

When I was a teenager, practically everyone had a telephone. Why should anyone have a ham rig at home when they can just talk on the telephone?

Sure there was. Ham radio was growing by leaps and bounds then. You were not part of it.

Preservation of values, skills and culture is everyone's job.

It's not a living museum.

Nope. Morse Code should be a license requirement because amateurs use it. The skill is part of being a qualified radio amateur. Simple as that.

It's not about hazing, Len. It's about being qualified. You're not qualified.

All good stuff - but that's not really the issue.

I'm all for multiple license classes, incentives, increasing privileges, etc.

But I think the problem K0HB is pointing out has to do with how those incentives are generated.

It's one thing to generate incentive by offering more privileges than you have now.

It's a very different thing to generate incentive by taking away some privileges, then requiring an upgrade to get them back.

Right now all Generals and Advanceds (something like 200,000 amateurs) can use 3600-3750 for CW/data. After the new rules, they will not be able to use those freqs at all.

Yes, they gain 3800-3850, but that's a gain of 50 kHz phone/image for a loss of 150.kHz CW/data.

Or look at it percentagewise. Right now, Generals have access to 3525-3750 and 3850-4000. That's 375 kHz total - 75% of the total band.
They have access to 90% of the non-phone bandspace and 60% of the 'phone bandspace.

After the change, Generals will have access to 3525-3600 and 3800-4000.
That's 275 kHz total - 55% of the total band. They will have access to 75% of the non-phone bandspace and 50% of the 'phone bandspace.

Back in the 1960s, the thing that ticked off some hams was not that the idea of upgrading. It was the idea that the "incentive" to upgrade came from having existing privileges taken away, rather than new ones added.

History repeats.

Today's computers are the direct descendants of ENIAC - the world's very first fully operational, high speed, general purpose, electronic digital computer.

There are far fewer generations between ENIAC and "today's computers" than there are between modern humans and the species those humans evolved from.

I certainly agree that no one should lose privileges. Let's hope that was a mistake and not intentional. And if it was a mistake that they fix it soon. I've seen some info on the ARRL site where they are seeking clarification of the R & O.

That's all well and good --- and if each "manageable step" has a corresponding increase in privilege, we could call that "Incentive Licensing".

But what we have here (and had in the 1960's) is "Dis-incentive Licensing" --- that's when you climb to a certain step (let's say "General") to enjoy a level of privs. Then along comes an FCC R&O which knocks away some of those privs and requires you to take another test in order to regain what you lost.

Not mentioned are the fact that voice mode radio ops often do repeats and phonetic spellings. "My name is Mike--Mike(??????) India Kilo

There's been enough false material penned here about hazing, hoops, rituals and the like to last a lifetime.

Len may use all the cellular phones, cordless phones, Family Radio Service HT's and Citizen's Band transceivers he likes. He isn't a radio amateur and likely will never become a radio amateur. All of his talk has been bluster and boast.

Dead on and woe be those who don't understand the principle. Close to 40 years on Mother FCC has apparently spanked us again, some of us anyway, "because upgrading is in the best long-term interest of the service". Or some such. God forbid they have the gonads to put it in those terms in writing. I keep wondering which organization would win a spin doctoring championship, the FCC or the ARRL.

I had a General ticket for 13-14 years when I lost ~ 70% of my customary DX-chasing spectrum haunts. It was not pretty. Having to take the 20wpm code test which back then meant getting 100 characters right on paper in front of a steely-eyed FCC Examiner and even worse having to trudge uphill both ways in a blizzard to the FCC office just to take the test . . <sob!>

Bleh.

Thousands of us accepeted Mother's stick-and-carrot challenge back then and it worked for us. If today's Generals really care about regaining the frequecies they're about to lose their way out was clearly demonstrated decades ago. My bet is that, for instance, very few Generals will get off their butts and upgrade just to get back their 80M CW/Data space, they'll jump all over their new 50Khz phone space on 75 and never look back. Ask one which he/she would rather have, the CW/Data freqs or the new phone privs . . talk about non-incentives . .

There is of course an outside chance that some intern screwed up the R&O . . they've been there and done that before . .

The foreign phone ops won't be able to move lower to escape us on 80, as we have been given the whole phone subband. OK, in some countries the CW subband isn't obligatory, but I doubt if they will go down there.

One down, three more to go (40, 20 and 15). True we got 25kHz more phone on 40, which I am grateful for, but that's still well short of what any other country has, and on 15 only the subbands for the lower classes moved, not the bottom edge of phone. Of course, on 20 there was no change, as there was no Novice subband to begin with.

OMEGA ONE RADIO WILL BE RETURNING

OMEGA ONE RADIO will be returning either tonight or tommorrow on 13.556.00 MHz we've got another transmitter and we will be getting it up soon...we have to change the wires in the interface and it should be up and running....were also in the process of putting up a 6Mhz antenna and that will be hopefully done this week.

Mark, when it comes to flaws you have no reason to hold your head above the crowd. You have a psychotic, built-in need to respond to each and every post made here. No matter that some of the posts have nothing to do with you. You simply cannot resist, can you?

I pity you. While you are mildly entertaining, you have "issues", Mark. You and your nemesis, Roger Wiseman, are not actually all that different. You and Roger are more alike than you are separate. Heck, you two could be brothers. Or sisters. Or both.

I feel sorry for you, Mark.

I just looked at your blog, Mark. I noted that NOBODY has made any visitor comments. Not a single one. Zero. Zilch. Nada.
Your blog is kind of like when you were a kid being chosen for sandlot baseball and you were always the last one chosen. You were "there" but invisible.
Now I see why you tout your blog as part of your sig, but really Mark, you should cease doing so. How long will it take you to get the hint that nobody is interested? Huh? You and your blog are simply not interesting. Boredom comes to mind.

Perhaps if you weren't such a spammer/idiot, if you had something to say that was pertinent to the topics at hand you'd be taken more seriously. You don't. As a result, Mark, you've been relegated to the Kill Files of most of the Usenet visitors. I wonder why? Would 100 or more daily posts have anything to do with it? Would stalking Steve have any bearing on why you have been Killfiled?

Yet you persist day in and day out. Your excuse? You claim you are defending your "virtue". Pure poppycock, Mark. You have no virtue to defend. You have no "good name" to defend.
You are an idiot, Mark. Pure and simple.
The only reason that Len responds to you is that Len feels sorry for you. Len feels he is doing you a favor in his condescending way. Len responds to you, you answer. Len feels good because he is doing his part to lend credence to a known idiot and all the while Len views you as a mental inferior. You are his "pet puppy" for the time being. He pats you on the head and you happily wag your tail. Apparently Lennie is more than familiar with the Pavlovian response.

On analague sat. there was Omega 1-3 for basic analogue set top boxes but Omega 4 covered the High Telecom bands as was only receivable on a good mid-price Analogue box aimed at reaching the Telecom bands. All these Omega stations played music at quite low power (for satellite). I just wondered if there was any connection at all?

Mark and Todd need to collaborate on a video project like that and put it on youtube. Todd could do all of the video production and story boarding, and Mark could stand in front of the camera and do the Steve, CTITECH and FCC bashing. Think about how many people Todd's hate speech would reach then.

And there's also the lolicon cartoon art. Maybe they could make something that included animated material. The possibilities are endless.

Yep, and that was just the problem. They were there pretty much by themselves. Oh, you heard the stories about the benevolent Extras cruising by and handing out that first QSO like Santa Claus in the Macy's Parade tossing candy to the kiddies, but those were just stories.

Litpoi wants to kill off the Novices and Tech plusses with a bucket of grenades.

That's a 50% increase. In any other context, N2EY would claim that 3% was ultra-significant. I guess different people have different ideas about what is significant.

Well within the FCC's jurisdiction. Or you could look at the bright side. When W1AW asks if the frequency is in use, the Novice could answer, "Yes, but we've never have mattered."

Fair enough. The ARRL told the FCC to get off the pot and address the petitions. They did.

Here's a reality check.

On 80m the rest of the world, except Canada, has always had phone down to 3600 as far back as I can remember, and we are merely joining them. The VE phone ops still have to stay above 3700, I think.

On 40m the international bandplans have phone down to 7040 except in Region 3 where it is 7030. The only countries that I know of where you can't use phone down to 7040 are Mexico (7050) and the USA (now 7125 after the change).

US hams outside Region 2 have had phone down to 7075 for years, and I am on record as suggesting that we should have that in the mainland US. It's hard to see why not when you actually look at what the rest of the world is doing.

At the same time countries in Region 1 aren't supposed to get access to 7100-7200 until the middle of 2007. Many of them already have, but for those that haven't, a phone subband that goes down to 7125 still doesn't even reach the top edge of their whole band. Doubtless some of them will be late in implementing the extra spectrum, so forced split working will drag on a while longer. How would you like it if your 40m CW allocation were on frequencies that were off limits to the DX?

On 20m and 15m we still have 50 kHz less phone on each band than all other countries. Although General and Advanced got bigger phone subbands on 15 (as well as 80 and 40), the bottom edge of phone didn't move on 15 (or 20).

Alun,

With all due respect, your signature line kind of reveals your agenda. We aren't talking about Extra's who don't use CW/rtty/data. The folks we're talking about here are Generals, the most populous HF license class in the US. On 75m they have just had their CW/rtty/data spectrum reduced by 2/3rds. That's outrageous!

That' may be true in theory, but not in practice. You can't use CW on frequencies which your license class prohibits. Generals just lost 150kHz of prime CW/rtty/data spectrum from 3.6 to 3.75MHz, the other parts of the band their license class doesn't allow. So much for "CW everywhere in band".

No, the rules concerning CW use have not changed. Those rules have never allowed a General to transmit CW (or anything else) in frequencies reserved for Extra and Advanced. In the case we're discussing the 150kHz from 3600 to 3750 have now been reserved for Extra and Advanced, and are now off limits to General who previously could transmit CW/rtty/data in that segment.

Here, I'll have a go.

When the new changes go into effect:

Generals gain 50 kHz of 'phone but lose 150 kHz of cw/rtty (1:3 ratio of gained/lost bandspace)
Advanceds gain 75 kHz of 'phone but lose 100 kHz of cw/rtty (3:4 ratio)
Extras gain 150 kHz of 'phone but lose 150 kHz of cw/rtty (1:1) Novices and codetested Techs gain 75 kHz in one part of the band but lose 75 kHz elsewhere (3:2)

Do you see the disparity, particularly for Generals? Why should it exist? What did Generals do to merit losing so much spectrum?

Why can't the low end of 75 be moved 50 kHz instead of 150 kHz, and the lower limit of each 'phone subband moved down 50 kHz? Then, each license class would gain as many kHz of 'phone as they lose CW/rtty.
1:1 ratio for everyone.

If you don't think 50 kHz is enough, make it 75 kHz. The point is that the most populous license class on the band loses the most total kHz!
The ratio is 1 kHz gained for 3 kHz lost - why?

How much will 3600-3700 be used when it is Extra-only?

One more question:

Why isn't rtty/data - particularly wider-than-1 kHz-data - allowed in the 'phone bands? Or rather, why should that restriction remain, particularly on a band that will be 4:1 phone/narrow modes? How are those modes any different from SSTV or CW in terms of compatibility?

It seems to me that a combination voice-data mode would have all sorts of uses in amateur radio. Imagine being in QSO with someone on SSB, and being able to send a data file to them without having to QSY. In fact, with a properly-designed rig, the data could be sent simultaneously on the opposite sideband, or on the suppressed-carrier frequency if a mode like PSK31 were used for data. Yet under current rules none of that is allowed, and the 80/75 bandspace where data modes will be allowed for any class of license will decrease from 250 kHz to 100 kHz - why?

hmm they lost acutals hz did they? is that what you are tlaking around or did things just get shuffed around same number hz justchanging the mode avalable

in the later I say where the beef if they lose acutaul hz for any use (total number for all modes then I have to wonder

It's the same thing. No comments means no one will bother to comment further.
Furthermore, they don't come back to your "blog" because it's a waste of time.

I thought there was an unwritten law that no new

Keep in mind that the US has more hams than the entire rest of the world combined if you don't include Japan in that count. So there is the potential for problems if our voice allocations go too low. Our regulations need to take that into account. As far as 40m goes, it will be a better solution if they can move the broadcasters out and make it a worldwide ham allocation up to 7.300. If the rest of the world could go to 7.3, that would open up a tremendous amount of space for other countries.

The comment is that you can use CW anywhere within the allowable frequencies for you class of license.

I personally would like to see all amateur frequencies open to CW operation by any and all classes of licenses.

Since 1955 for international civil aviation. It's taken from the NATO approved phonetic alphabet which came out earlier the same year. I remember it well since I had to learn the "new" phonetic alphabet in a hurry while in the Army then. :-)

Ever since 1955 the worldwide common language for civil aviation communications on airways has been English spoken as well as (now) data. That includes pilots as well as controllers, even in and over their native country; a non-English speaking country MAY use their native language but the civil airways can have many nations' aircraft in it.

Blowcode is just another troll who has his head up his ass in regards to radio communications. That head just hasn't been aware of what happened in radio for a half century.

The ITU didn't "just remove" anything. The ITU-R made the code test for an amateur license with below-30-MHz privileges OPTIONAL to each administration. In 2003.
THREE years ago, not "just now." :-)

In the minds of some olde-tymers they think they invented ham radio. <shrug>

On a trip a couple years ago, I met an "old-timer" ham who was in his mid-fifties. He went on and on and on about ham radio, straight from the Book of St. Hiram, sounding off as if all around him were clueless civilians. I didn't say too much at first, but began with some of his claims...and demolished each one by the referencible facts of the radio-electronics industry and military electronics-radio. Finally he got down to his "trump card" which was He was "federally authorized to transmit by the government!" I happened to have my old First 'Phone ID card in my wallet along with IEEE membership card (current) and showed that, adding that He was NOT authorized to transmit OUTSIDE of the ham bands on "shortwave." [I couldn't believe he still used that old term "shortwave" instead of HF]

Through all of that I was cool and collected and never personally insulted him. His reaction was AS IF I did.
I had to defuse the non-discussion for the sake of the host. Pity that for this guy was really looking for a personal combat situation, but was a bit too sloshed to pose any physical threat to me. Moral of this story is that there are lots of those self-important hams who are hams mostly for the rank-status-privilege of that "federal authorization" and have lost any sense of cameraderie or fun of just communications with other hobbyists.

The Imposter is just another common carbon-copy of that mid-life-crisis guy, but one on speed or uppers.

What happened, Jimmie, you see an old TV movie about the glorious USMC heroes and are attempting to out-do Robeson in the "YOU LIE, YOU LIE!" department? :-)

Are you trying to pull out a SINGLE exception (from millions of PCs in use daily) which went DEFUNCT less than two years from its announcement? Of course you are! You HAVE to. Your ego depends on it.

purchase the main box without the CRT display.

That "portable" didn't last long on the market, did it?

Can you name the CP/M-based PCs that preceded the original IBM PC? No? Why not? Tens of thousands were in use, including in businesses.

>You wrote that you "can't find ANY relatively modern computer" with

That's true, Jimmie. In row upon row of many makes and models of personal computers at Frys in Burbank, CA, (intersection of Hollywood Way and Van Owen street)
there isn't a single one with a vacuum tube in it.
The same thing happens at Best Buy at the Empire Center (where the main Lockheed factory had been) in Burbank.
I can go to Office Depot or Office Max and see the same...or Circuit City or Comp USA or PC Club (the one on Victory Blvd in Burbank at one corner of the OSH center)...or dozens of smaller shops handling computers.

Only in Jimmieworld. :-)

Now you just hop on over to your nearest AM BC station and convince the station manager and chief engineer that sticking a high-power, special carbon microphone in series with the antenna feedline is "PRACTICAL."

Then you run over to the nearest ACM group and tell them that 10 KHz clock rates on computers is "better" and "more PRACTICAL" than 1 GHz clock rates. Good luck on that.

HOW? Name the applications of ENIAC that served ham radio.

Absolutely right.

I've had a keen interest in personal computing (as well as numerical calculation) for over a quarter century.
The ONLY exceptions to personal computers having vacuum tubes involve the DISPLAY, NOT the "sound output."

Vacuum tubes are just TOO SLOW to be of value in either computation or the memory sections of computers. The Information Technology folks found that out a half century ago and never looked on vacuum tubes as worthy of computation technology.

"Mistaken" in WHAT?

You CANNOT have worked on ENIAC prior to 1955.

What minicomputer did you work on or with?

isn't valid for "working on" a personal computer.

by you against the 'evil' eliminators).

Why do you persist with your must-have-code-test obsession? There's NOTHING stopping anyone from USING OOK CW telegraphy, so why is the code test a requirement for amateur privileges below 30 MHz? You can't give any rational answer to that, only the EMOTIONAL one, the personal one where YOU think all must take that test.

The year 2004 is "relatively modern," isn't it? :-)

The Internet went public in 1991. Is 1991 "relatively modern?"

The US government, all agencies and officers were on the Internet since the mid-1990s. Even the US military (that you never served in) was on the Internet.

>Nope. Wrong.

Sorry, Jimmie, you made one HORRENDOUS technological ERROR!

Do your homework on IT technology, say from 1955 onwards.
Try some basic subjects like "Harvard Architecture" and all-binary registers, fetch-and-carry, addressing and data.
Forget the old IBM plugboards and patch cords of pre-WW2 technology (what you think as "ROM"?) and all-machine-language programming transition to "high-level" languages.
That's several HUNDRED specific technological areas that lie between 1946 through 1980 and on to 2006. Big, big BIG changes in ALL of them.

I don't claim any "expertise" on computers...but what I DO know is way, Way, WAY ahead of your misconception of "practical" computing technology being that of ENIAC.

Your whole tirade in here is tied to YOUR emotional state about ONE of the first WORKING computers at the Moore School of Engineering. Emotional infatuation that is bordering on the religious belief akin to sects.

Sex is still better than sects.

>> >btw, the "Ordnance Corps" are the nice folks who take care of things

>Then who makes up the firing tables?

Little computers on or with the field pieces and anti-aircraft weaponry.

The only exception is the field mortars which have been using the same elementary "firing tables" in use prior to any ENIAC...i.e., since before WW2.

You can begin by studying "TACFIRE" and its evolution but RELATIVELY MODERN (since 1980) artillery aiming and firing has been systemized with field computers doing the "on-line" tasks of aiming, especially with moving targets. The Abrams tank turret gun is computer-controlled as one example, that one may be responsible for its very high "kill" ratio that ranks among the best of the world's military. Try the AEGIS missle cruiser fire control system, able to track several targets simultaneously and direct gun fire as well as missle firing. Try the modern aircraft fire control systems, in everything from the old F-102 on up to the F-18 and F-22, systems which are an integral part of the whole airframe's control. Cruise missles (around since the 1970s) don't use "firing tables" or even "sectional charts" to fly to a preset target all by themselves. ALL of those are about as "related" to ENIAC as the modern word processor-computer-printer is to clay tablets and cuneiform writing, perhaps what you would call "practical" writing-recording of data.

Jimmie, you REALLY need to get your head out of your ass and into the modern world.

"Just a few keystrokes" will get you that phrase, Jimmie.

The late Jimmy Pearson coined it. Lots of us old

This needed to be down years ago. Good to see the ARRL and the FCC are listening to the active Amateurs and doing what the majority want.

Interesting to know that Phone operators are appliance operators and CW operators are not. I guess the CW operators are all using Homebrew equipment and if not then I hope at least that every one of them that own a Yaesu FT-1000MP / D have done the CW modification and did it them selves without senting it to a repair place ?

Some 14-year-olds chose the "parochial school" run by the Church of St. Hiram. Google it at www.arrl.org :-)

Is it a deep, dark SECRET, Jimmie? :-)

Something like the Masons?

Is it something like a NON-serving civilian telling a real veteran "all about" the military?

Tsk, tsk, Mitzi let her son Pauly do stand-up there and he BOMBED. :-) Not once but several times.

His "films" were kept alive only by PR.

Have you EVER been to a comedy club, Jimmie? An Improv group? Ever DO stand-up comedy? [obviously not...:-)]

BWAAAAAAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAHAH!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!

No "mincemeat" occurred, Jimmie. Really. If it did then NBC and KNBC-TV (where the show is taped) would have made headlines on page 1 with civil suits against them.

Yes, she IS!

Bad habit, Jimmie.

No problem with me. I volunteered for US Army military

Do you see enjoying your radio hobby as a "service to the nation?" Does your license say you are "defending the Constitution of the United States?

>Freedom of Speech carries with it the Responsibility of Truth.

Who said so (besides yourself)?

Have you knuckle-spanked any Political Party member lately? :-)

You really should do that, Jimmie. Their "responsibility of truth" is stretched way beyond even your strict REdefinitions of "truth!" :-)

>I have several radios....

Ech. MATERIAL things, Jimmie. Can you communicate on them simultaneously by yourself?

That and attempting to defame any no-code-test advocate in

Of course you do...you are an "engineer." :-)

Here's a hint: You might - if searching properly - turn up the common asterisk-spaced acronym of it. Since you

Alun you've been dumping this old whine into the groups for years now and it's long since worn out. Not that it needs to be explained to you again but the FCC is protecting the dx from the hordes of Yanks who would obliterate the dx if we were allowed to run SSB below 7100.

Dee also explaned it in her immediately preceeding post, read it, give us a break and internalize it this time then go find something new to grouse about for the next five years. Maybe by then your chums in the UK will be able to transceive with you above 7125.

> How would you like it if your 40m CW allocation were on

The difference is all about one SSB signal taking up the same amout of spectrum space as 5-10 CW signals.

Good Grief! It's as if the US Navy really does control the ARS, just like they wanted to do in the early days. With the Navy, its all about tradition.

Which one, I wonder? He's paid alimony to the first,
makes nice-nice claims about his second's amateur license, but it probably in some delusional phase thinking about wifey #3 that doesn't exist.

However, he IS condoned by all the amateur extras in here with exceptions only of Hans and Alun. He is "A-OK" with Jimmie Noserve and that Waffen SS guy...

I guess we need a "clarification" on that from Mister ham radio, Jimmie Noserve. He always claims the "correct" definition on Remember, you promised. And besides they're Len Anderson's and have the IEEE logo on them. He wants them back.

Of course.

Also, if the transmission is something that needs to be written down, like a formal message, the effective speed drops to the writing speed of the person receiving the message.

Len does not accept the First Rule of Comedy, even though it applies to him.

He seems to think that putting a smiley at the end makes something funny, even when it doesn't.

The car I learned on didn't have vent windows.

Ah, a "challenge" - one that has nothing to do with amateur radio.

Where's John Denver when ya need him?

Now about challenges:

Here's one for Len - tell me what ya think:

Field Day 2007. Entry class 1B-1 (one transmitter, one operator). The challenge is to assemble, transport, set up, operate, and take down a complete FD station - singlehanded, no outside help - and make the highest score. Field Day location must not be owned or rented by the participant and must not be a licensed amateur station location. All equipment used must be legitimately owned by the operator. All FCC regulations and ARRL rules that apply to Field Day must be complied with by all involved. Results report must be submitted to ARRL before the deadline. Highest official score wins.

Now of course this would mean that Len would actually have to get his license out of the box.

How's that for a challenge?

Well, maybe.

I think that Len equates being corrected with being humiliated. When he posts something that is incorrect, and someone corrects it, he feels humiliated and angry. It's even worse when the person doing the correcting is someone he considers to be inferior to him - which is almost everybody.

Thus he behaves according to the profile, driven by anger and humiliation at being proved wrong.

Really quite sad, when you think about it.....

Well, now, Mark, that's interesting. A few questions:

What institution granted your degree, and what year?

What is the title of your Masters thesis?

Why do you hyphenate the word "geophysics?" It isn't hyphenated in normal usage. A geophysicist would know that.

What are "sesmis" waves? Or do you mean "seismic?" And how do they "progate?"

There's an old saying in baseball. You can bullshit the fans but you can't bullshit the players.

That wasn't even a good try, Mark.

The error is attaching the same value to General cw/rtty space per Khz as you're attaching to their phone space per Khz. Which it is not.

Unless I'm 'way off the mark the vast majority of Generals won't miss the cw/rtty space at all and they'll be delighted with their new phone space. Note the lack of Generals expressing any opinions on the subject. If they're not in here complaining about losing cw/rtty space why should us OF Extras care about the subject one way or the other?

> How much will 3600-3700 be used when it is Extra-only?

We'll find out soon enough won't we? Then again the new 3600 band edge could well be just a placeholder for "things to come" rather than just another conventional expansion of phone space. This R&O has too many oddities in it like this one for me to believe that the FCC is finished "streamlining the service". Maybe it's the result of the ARRLs pestering the FCC to publish a response to the NPRMs. So the FCC did and damn the torpedoes so this is what we got. For now. Bought the FCC more time to quietly come up with their "real" omnibus NPRM/R&O?

Maybe so!

Note how, in more than one Report and Order, FCC has pointed out how little testing it takes to upgrade to Extra. FCC has repeatedly turned down all proposals that would have granted instant upgrades, like making all Advanceds into Extras. Maybe it's time to take the hint.

I think we're on to the same idea.

I wonder what FCC really thinks of us hams. Sure, they say certain things - because they have to. But consider what amateur radio may look like to at least some of them:

We have huge amounts of spectrum set aside for us by international treaty, and we yelp at the loss of even small amounts of it to other services.We don't generate any real revenue, yet we keep asking for more enforcement.

Users of other services complain about interference from us (even when it's not our fault) and we complain about interference from power lines, appliances, etc., that don't seem to bother anybody else. We raise holy heck over new technologies like BPL, even though the state-of-the-art experts who design the new technologies say we amateurs are wrong.

And now the big one:

We amateurs send in way too many petitions/proposals to FCC, and then cannot agree about what we really want.

I think what FCC expects is for us hams to argue amongst ourselves and work out what rules we really want before sending in any petitions/proposals. Then, when a proposal is sent in and FCC gives it an RM number, the comments are overwhelmingly positive and FCC's job is easy.

Look at the recent "bandwidth" proposals. ARRL sends in one, a group called CTT sends in another. Both are given RM numbers and very short comment periods. Both get a ton of comments - overwhelmingly opposed! CTT is opposed even more than ARRL (something like 7 or 8 to 1 against for both of them).

Could be that the folks at FCC who have to go through all that are angry at having to deal with it? Two groups who both claim to know what's best for amateur radio sent in proposals that cost a lot of FCC resources. But neither group gets widespread amateur support first, so the comments are an overwhelming "NO!" to both proposals.

The Morse Code test issue is even more of a mess. Treaty changes, FCC gets 18 proposals! Huh? Some are poles apart while others are virtually identical. They gotta deal with 18 RMs and comments on all of them. One self-proclaimed "PROFESSIONAL", who isn't even a ham and doesn't intend to be one, sends them hundreds of pages of comments and reply comments, which they have to wade through.

Now look at what Industry Canada dealt with. The national society worked out a compromise on the issue, got consensus from its members and the general Canadian amateur radio community, then made a proposal - complete with detailed poll results. Proposal was supported in comments and sailed right through. RAC made IC's work easy.

When's the last time any proposal sent to FCC by hams (not just ARRL) got widespread support in the comments?

Ah, but you should be able to answer some simple questions that any

Well, now, Charlie, that's interesting. A few questions:

Why is a non-radio related topic on QRZ now on RRAP?

Why is this your first posting EVER on any newsgroup, and it just happened to be RRAP?

There may be old sayings in baseball, but of what relevance are they to amateur radio?

Why is profanity a large part of your first message to RRAPpers?

I guess Robesin doesn't mind profanity as long as he's ingonito.

She has a ham license and she has an RRAP account. And she's posted here before. Yet she remains silent on he husbands heinous activities on RRAP.

Or maybe she's a figment of his imagination and Robesin would have to roll out her old RRAP account when he's much too busy creating new accounts for our geophysicist visitors.

He probably came directly from the hamfest instead of stopping at home

Even if there is karma, they won't understand it or tie it to their unreasonable desire to make everyone learn code.

Ignore the spoil-sports. The actuarial tables will eventually silence them.

Yeah, Mark. Give them back. What a geophysicist like you really

Hi! I've heard rumor of this secret clause, but have never seen it.
Maybe now that we've got someone from the home team in the UN, that secret clause can see the light of day.

Had he never made this "excrement eating" claim, he'd be far, far ahead in the game. But he had to be clever and post something so off topic and so very, very disgusting in order to smear you. And in his cleverness, he got it wrong.

He's a self-declared, excrement eating idiot.

I see something a bit less nefarious. I think the FCC made a decision without thinking it through--perhaps pushed to do so by the ARRL call for action to be taken. What will be interesting is to see if the Commission corrects its action or simply attempts to justify it.

You're certainly correct that there seems to have been almost no raising of the alarm by General Class licensees.

Im sure the numbers would look even wose if the licenses expired sooner.
Most of the new hams I know lose interest in a couple of years, long befor the licence expires.

That is about the most absurd and funniest thing I have heard yet.
Morkie wouldn't know a "sesmis" wave from a doorknob, much less about it's "progation". What an idiot.

Those darned new hams. They never should have been licensured in the first place. Didn't have the ooomph to get licensed when the tests were harder so they weren't really that innerested in the first place.
Didn't show the proper dedication.

at times if they step out of line and dare to be different the fear was being different would cause harm to everyone for the jews it was not completely irrational as the Czars and Adolf have shown over the

The "relationship" between ham radio and the FCC is no different overall than the way the FAA gets pounded by the recreational aviation crowd and the Department of the Interior gets Excedrin headaches from the hiking, camping, hunting and fishing bunch. The ongoing regulatory brawls between the skimobile/ATV users vs. the preservationists make our little code test dispute look laughable in comparison. When it's all said and done the regulatory agencies have been instructed by law and funded by Congress to deal with the sometimes goofy issues we the public stick them with - since it's us who are paying them to do it.

No sympathy. See above about who gets paid to do what.

No way. The FCC staffers who deal with these things don't live in a vacuum, they're not stupid and they know bullshit when it lands in their inboxes and they know how to handle it. By now they've long since gotten wise to Anderson's childish antics and his "comments" just get rubber-stamped "READ" and tossed into the outbox without further ado. He's not having any impact at all at the FCC and he knows it, he's trolling for folk like you who get their knickers in a twist over his nonsense.

Back when I worked in Canada for a number of months and it was a real eye-opener. One big lesson I learned is that Yanks in general don't understand that in many respects Canada is culturally quite different from the U.S. even though the language is functionally identical and the border is wide open by international standards. In a nutshell my take has been that Canadians are far more likely to come to a consensus than we are by their general nature. So are most of the Europeans. We're the global odd jobs, we're notorious all over the planet for preferring food fights to regulatory peace and quiet. We is what we is, the old "herding cats" syndrome in play.

all even vhf comos should conect the island a little trobo action and the islands should stable enough and of CW should have been able to get though

but I still keep hearing from the islands are having trouble keeping the assesment teams in touch with emergncy management

why is this happening where the CW op to save the day?

First off... this is coming from General... who was Grandfathered...

I know many people who are not Extras and who have not passed the 20wpm that respect those OM very much. I love to sit at field day and watch in awe at a CW operator. Just because I can't do it doesn't mean I don't respect it. And there are many other people like that. So please dont lump all of us "meaningless generals" into one please.

The qrz topic is radio related. It had to do with how easy the Technician exam is these days and how it is so easy that people who know nothing about ham radio can pass it. Markie just HAD to respond and flaunt his superior intellectual capabilities.

You have a problem with that? Life ain't fair. Learn to deal with it.

If you can't see the relevance then I'll translate: it's a lot easier to lie to spectators about what's happening on the playing field than it is to lie to the people actually playing the game.

> Why is profanity a large part of your first message to RRAPpers?

I've seen some of your posts. You have no room to talk. Besides, since this is RRAP, I figured I should use words you are used to.

It's "Robeson" and "incognito." And I'm not Robeson. How come you see

That's another possibility. By whatever means it happened this one seems to have a "quality control problem" . . . strange . .

Or they just publish and go do something else. I don't remember them ever doing a post-publishing "explanation". Then comes the fact that this flap is about a slice of currently very underutilized spectrum space. Which is to say it really doesn't much matter how it gets "refarmed".

Sometimes I stretch the truth like when I say Robesin is nuts. He's actually crazy, but I try to be polite.

Robesin can force himself on a different audience - one that doesn't know him. It's too late for the folks on rrap.

there someething to oversimplfing In rrap I often gloss over minor points in on radio matters to get to the point everyone steches or abuses the truth a bit

robeson rapes the truth

Thanks!

But consider that you could probably do it, too.

Nobody is born knowing Morse Code. Those who know it, learned it and kept on learning it. They all started from zero. Sure, some people have more innate skill/talent than others, but that's just one factor. Most people learn to understand speech at more than 100 wpm - is 20 wpm code more complex than that?

Problem is he tries to "fit in" with reality and that doesn't work. He can't get by on bluffing and LIES.

Ol' Jimmie really gets off on the Philadelphia area "firsts."

He went into fantasy orgasm on ENIAC of 1946. He conveniently left out the Colossus work in the UK from 1942 onwards and made NO mention of the Atanasoff-Berry Computer at Iowa State University in 1939. The "ABC" was recreated (almost exactly as the original) in 1998 at ISU in Ames, IA.

I had originally mixed up 'Ohio' and 'Iowa' and 'OSU' v 'ISU.'
[thanks to a private e-mail from another, non-RRAP person]
My apologies to Iowa State and its grads and fans. Ohio State had a good computer science section in 1970s and 1980s, probably still has. Just the same, Professor John V. Atanasoff had the first idea that was put into practice with the help of graduate student Clifford Berry...in 1939 to 1942. Iowa State has some very good pages on the "ABC" in the Internet, including the working replica.

Jimmie also left out an important patent civil suit between Honeywell and Sperry-Rand (which had bought out the ENIAC rights to bail out a near-bankrupt Eckert and Mauchly).
ENIAC had claimed to be the "first." Problem is, Mauchly had visited ISU, even staying at Atanasoff's hourse for days, learning about the "ABC," seeing it, talking to Cliff Berry.
In 1941. All of that came out in court and ISU has copies of the judge's 19 October 1973 final decision paper.

That sort of SELECTIVE highlighting with the sin of omission or related facts is what the ARRL does most of the time. Naturally, those who attended the "parochial school" of the Church of St. Hiram will pick up on the technique.

I'm not sure about the last part but, as I understand it, the first paragraph means that all even vhf comos should conect the island a little trobo action and the islands should stable enough and of CW should have been able to get through.

"Self-proclaimed?" No, according to several corporations, the IRS, the Franchise Tax Board of California, DCAS, and the professional association known as the IEEE have all said I was a professional...professional as in accepting monetary compensation for work performed. :-) Really?!? :-)

Kelly is now an "insider" at the FCC? :-)

No, sweetums, what you wrote is what YOU want to believe happens. Just because you WANT something doesn't mean it is true. :-)

>He's not having any impact at all at the FCC and he knows it, he's >trolling for folk like you who get their knickers in a twist over his >nonsense.

Poor baby, still hurting over past go-arounds in RRAP?

"Impact" is a very subjective word. What you really want is to "impact" me with some heavy blunt object. :-)

Unfortunately, Kelly isn't able to get what he wants so
HE trolls with nastygrams on his perceived "enemies."

The FCC is supposed to accept input from ALL citizens.
That doesn't mean it accepts input only from special-interest groups such as the ARRL in regards to amateur radio. Nor is that input limited to radio manufacturers whether their offices are in the USA or on foreign soil.

Since you don't seem to have observed any OTHER radio services' on-going agendas, you would be surprised at the number of individual citizen inputs the FCC DOES receive. Spend some time on those other issues, old-timer, get some better education on what the FCC gets (and must show to the rest of the public).

Sure - but the results may be very different. I doubt FCC is too worried about the amateur community as "the public". They're too busy dealing with wardrobe malfunctions and Howard Stern wannabes.

Agreed.

They gotta accept 'em and read 'em. They don't have to act on them.

I doubt he knows it.

As for knickers, it's not mine that are in a twist.

FCC could have just dropped Element 1 in August 2003. Memorandum Report and Order, coupla paragraphs and done. All they'd have to do is say that the issue was thoroughly discussed before the 2000 restructuring, and the treaty was the only reason they kept Element 1.

But they didn't, and now it's almost 3-1/2 years later.

Yup.

But that makes no difference when it comes to getting what we want out of FCC. I think we'd do a lot better to get a consensus before deluging them with proposals and comments, that's all.

But that's a lot of work. You think an outfit like NCI is going to do all the legwork and compromising to get consensus? Don't hold yer breath.

Was the Colossus a general purpose machine? Was it electronic, or partly electromechanical? Did it have a jump instruction?

Or was it a custom-made special-purpose decryption machine?

As for the ABC, it was not completely electronic. More importantly, the original was never completed. ENIAC was fully operational for over a decade - ABC was not finished until 1998.

Doesn't change the validity of what I wrote. The ENIAC was completed and operational by 1946. ABC was not. The patent in question was not relevant to which machine was the first general purpose, high speed, electronic digital computer.

They should auction off the president and board of directors too. They ain't worth anything but maybe the new board will do something to support policy that will increase the integrity of the service to what it used to be before all the dumbing down.

It friggen figures the president of the ARRL would say that. They're only interested in selling memberships, they're not interested in the quality of the radio amateur. Ham radio can be like CB for all they care.

I'm not against choice. They can choose to be a ham, or they can choose to be a CB'er. What they have to decide is how bad do they want to be a ham. I enjoy hams on the bands, if I didn't, I'd buy a CB.

That's what happens when something gets dumbed down. It cheapens it, and people find no value in maintaining or continuing with it.

Right. Pilots and ATC have to pass tests too. Do you think it would be good if their tests were dumbed down?

And you haven't changed a bit either Len. You should be taking part in the more technical groups and not arguing policy with pro-coders, or are you hoping to be the second No-Code Extra after Markie?

I was just reading through all the weekend RRAP traffic and I noticed something.

Markie could learn a lot from Steve. Ham-and-cheese, Markie, and a few others attacked Steve, But did Steve follow-up to it? No.

Markie, you can learn from Steve. Don't follow-up to the attack threads. We don't care to see your one line of mis-spelled shit anyway, so it's not like we're missing anything important.

Markie, Take a break from RRAP for a while, go learn to spell, Learn CW. Then come back. I'm sure Ham-and-Cheese will welcome you back.

Most hams with blogs don't have a problem with visitor comments. The hams that visit mine don't leave nasty comments. Must be something unique to you and Markie. I was going to leave a nice thank you note on your blog as soon as you played a good song on Omega One, but I haven't heard you play a good song yet.

I do give you Five Stars on your Omega one anti-FCC rants and RRAP flame monlogues. LOL, those were funny as hell. I should have recorded them and sent them to a medical university so instructors could show their psych students a variety of different forms of mental illness, paranoia, and instability.

Anyone that made or is making an effort to be able to copy CW at 20 WPM, isn't going to have a problem having fun releasing a little solder smoke building things. The old 20 wpm extras seem to me to get more out of being a radio amateur than these latter day no-codes and nickle hams. Maybe that is why we see people getting licensed and they leave the service before their license even expires.

Getting a license and then leaving, that's not how it should be.

Thanks Todd. I look forward to hearing your moms shitty records and 8-Track tapes again. Your're monologues are hilarious too. 73, Keep up the good work.

I'm stocking up beer for the N9OGL NAL party. Plenty of beer enemas to go around for everyone. I hope you don't mind if K4YZ gives the beer enema's. Steve said he wouldn't come unless he could give the enemas.
Steve is a nurse, so I'm sure he probably knows how to give someone an Construction projects you or I have done aren't important. Working to insure ham radio doesn't turn into CB is important. Agreed?

ARRL is willing to let the problem get worse by not supporting policy that will improve or at least maintain the quality of individuals getting licensed. Maybe they don't care if hams are like CB'ers as long as the memberships keep rolling in.

Can you say: Breaker Breaker 19? That's where we're headed.

It's started going down hill about the mid-eighties and the ARRL pushed to make it go down hill faster. That crash at the bottom ain't gonna look pretty... or sound pretty.

Here's a valid reason for continued CW testing: To keep lowlifes like you and Markie out of ham radio and off HF. You're too lazy to try to be real hams. You see no value in being effective communicators, therefore you're both worthless to the service and if you had to use CW to save a life that person would die. You're both probably too lazy to use a microphone to help save anyone too.

I'd like to see the No-code Tech class go away with a 5 wpm Tech the being entry level to the service, or bring back a code only Novice class again.
Require 13 wpm code test for general and 20 wpm an Extra again.

People that don't like it should stay on CB. Ten-Four? This should provide you and Markie a lot to stroke each other with. You both seem to sing the same tune.

Trying to hijack the thread again, Mark?

Looks as if Chris put you in a corner when he said, "And before you go any further, be aware that I used to work with Falvey back in the 80's when I was employed as a geophysicist by the Gulf Research Company both in Harmarville, Pennsylvania and in Houston, Texas. We sponsored part of Falvey's research.

In short, I'm a real geophysicist. That's why I seriously doubt that you are."

Somebody called you out on your lies and now you have no comment save to accuse "Steve" of harrassing you again. You have no shame, do you?

No I didn't take the code test. You're absolutely no help. You just try and stir the pot. If you have so much knowledge why don't you share it with the group instead of just causing trouble.

I took the test the government of my country prescribed I take. If you don't like it call the FCC. I've long since tired of your whining.

I thought you knew everything there is to know about Ham radio. I thought you were the upmost authority on everything.

Sounds like you know from experience. Now we know who the CB expert is on the group.

Trying to hijack the thread again, Mark?

Looks as if Chris put you in a corner when he said, "And before you go any further, be aware that I used to work with Falvey back in the 80's when I was employed as a geophysicist by the Gulf Research Company both in Harmarville, Pennsylvania and in Houston, Texas. We sponsored part of Falvey's research.

In short, I'm a real geophysicist. That's why I seriously doubt that you are."

Somebody called you out on your lies and now you have no comment save to accuse "Steve" of harrassing you again. You have no shame, do you?

he posed his questioion as steve always no matter what answer he gets calls it lie just more of the standard steve attack crap
No, it is not. Chris caught you in a bold-faced lie and now you are trying to change the topic so as to weasel your way around being outed.
You've been busted, pure and simple.

Trying to hijack the thread again, Mark?

Looks as if Chris put you in a corner when he said, "And before you go any further, be aware that I used to work with Falvey back in the 80's when I was employed as a geophysicist by the Gulf Research Company both in Harmarville, Pennsylvania and in Houston, Texas. We sponsored part of Falvey's research.

In short, I'm a real geophysicist. That's why I seriously doubt that you are."

Somebody called you out on your lies and now you have no comment save to accuse "Steve" of harrassing you again. You have no shame, do you?

>Trying to hijack the thread again, Mark?
no thread to hijack

just another of steve effort to conuct harrassment and get an answer to question I refuse to answer and one that is off topic and not proper to begin with
....

The question is only "not proper" because it put you on the spot as being a liar and you are uncomfortable about being exposed as such.
Who are YOU to determine what is on topic or not on topic, anyway?
You have no credibility. No life, no common sense, and certainly no degree in geophysics.
All you have is Usenet and a sick fixation on Steve.

FUCK the Canadians.....Americans are lucky to have Australia as a friend. The Aussies have balls but the Canadians are pussies!

Australia is the only country that is also a continent. In area, Australia ranks as the sixth largest country and smallest continent. It lies between the South Pacific Ocean and the Indian Ocean, about 7,000 miles (11,000 kilometers) southwest of North America and about 2,000 miles (3,200 kilometers) southeast of mainland Asia. Australia is often referred to as being "down under" because it lies entirely within the Southern Hemisphere. The name Australia comes from the Latin word australis, which means southern. The official name of the country is the Commonwealth of Australia.

Picture
Australian outback Australia has many different kinds of environment and climates, from tropical in the north to cool and temperate in the south. The huge interior of Australia is mostly desert or dry grassland and has few settlements. Australia is the second driest continent. Only Antarctica gets less precipitation than Australia. However, Australia has numerous areas with a pleasant climate and enough rainfall and fertile soil for agriculture.

Picture
Australia flag and coat of arms The southeastern coastal region has the most people by far. Australia's two largest cities-Sydney and Melbourne-lie in this region. Canberra, the national capital, lies only a short distance inland. The country as a whole averages only about 6.5 people per square mile (2.5 people per square kilometer). Most Australians live in urban or suburban areas in the major cities. Australia is famous for its vast open spaces, bright sunshine, and unusual wildlife. Kangaroos, koalas, platypuses, and wombats are only a few of the many unusual animals that live in Australia.

Sound
Australia's national anthem The country was once a group of British colonies, and most Australian people have British ancestry. When people first moved to Australia from Great Britain (now the United Kingdom), they took many British customs with them. For example, Australians drive on the left side of the road, as do British drivers. Since the 1950's, immigration from many different countries has made the population more mixed and the way of life more varied. Australia now considers itself a multicultural nation.

Australians have developed a way of life all their own. Australia has a warm, sunny climate. People spend much of their free time out of doors. Australians love outdoor sports and outdoor living in general. Many Australians also like to travel overseas for study, work experience, and holidays. See Life expectancy (table: Life expectancy at birth for selected countries).

Australia has a thriving economy that makes it one of the world's developed countries. It has busy cities, modern factories, and highly productive farms and mines. Australia is the world's leading producer and exporter of wool and bauxite (the ore from which aluminum is made). Australia also produces and exports large amounts of other minerals and farm goods. Income from these exports makes it possible for most Australians to have a high standard of living. Australia's chief trading partners are Japan and the United States.

The first Australians were a people known today as Aborigines «AB uh RIHJ uh neez». The Aborigines had lived in Australia for at least 50,000 years before the first white settlers arrived. The Torres Strait Islands and Papua New Guinea are the home of Australia's second indigenous (native) people, known today as the Torres Strait Islanders.

Great Britain settled Australia as a prison colony in 1788. After British settlement, the number of whites steadily increased while the Aboriginal population declined dramatically. The Aboriginal population slowed its decline in the early 1900's and has been increasing since the mid-1900's. Today, the majority of Australians are white or have mixed European ancestry, although there are now also many Australians from Asian and Middle Eastern backgrounds.

SC, tell us all, and don't lie. Do you not agree that a LOT of hams today were CB'ers in the '70's and chose to advance their radio skills by advancing to ham radio? If you disagree, then 1) you're a liar, and 2) did this not help the service? And thusly, if you disagree I suspect you fit

Heterosexual Terrorism and Heterosexual Dictatorship

Heterosexual people are terrorists. They have always attacked and agressed people. They have always molested, bullied and criticised others. When the others criticise them, they threaten them. They want to silence them. They do not accept criticism. They claim the right and the freedom to attack and criticise others but they refuse others this same right to criticise them.

Heterosexual people terrorize others by violence and repression. They terrorize people also by passing discriminatory laws against others. This heterosexual terrorism and dictatorship have been legalised and institutionalized. There is something common in heterosexual people, terrorists and religious extremists and fanatics. Their psychologies are more or less the same.

Heterosexual people are like dictators and religious fanatics. They do not accept that people question and criticise them. They are tyrannical. They want to make people believe that heterosexuality cannot be questionned, analyzed, criticised and challenged. This shows that heterosexuals are totalitarian.

Heterosexual people have oppressed others for centuries and if we suggest making them feel for only a week (or even a day) what they have done to others, they rant and threaten with violence. This confirms the terrorist nature and mentality of heterosexual people. They are the source of all evils in this world. The only solution is to remove them from the world. All hetero bandits, hetero pigs, hetero fornicators, hetero perverts, hetero fanatics and hetero murderers should be condemned to death. The world will be a better place without those hetero shit.

Heterosexual people are terrorists. They like to resort to violence. They don't care about children. They just use children as an arm and a shield to justify and defend their lustful and lascivious heterosexual desires.

All dictators and terrorists are heterosexual.

The talibans who were dictatorial and who tortured women were also heterosexual. All those black dictators of african origin are heterosexual.

Heterosexuals have always been on the offensive. They have always attacked others without good arguments. Their attacks are based on lies, violence, vulgarity and injustice. Gays and other groups of people have always been on the defensive. This is why heterosexuals have become arrogant and tyrannical. Gays and other groups of people should strike back more often. They should counter attack They should be more on the offensive also. In fact it is heterosexuals who have not respected others. They have oppressed others. The others have the right to strike back. Heterosexuals have always acted like terrorists. This is Heterosexual Terrorism. They should be condemned.

Five articles are reproduced below to show how heterosexuals are murderous, abnormal, perverted, sinful and dirty.

Heterosexuals are beasts and filthy

Heterosexuals like to criticise others when they have themselves many more faults, defects, vices and perversions.

Heterosexuals are monsters. In 1999, in a few days heterosexuals committed many monstrous crimes. In Egypt a man stabbed the lover of his wife 300 times and then cut his head. In Israel a man set fire to the house of his wife, killing his wife and his children. In atlanta, USA a man killed his wife and children and then killed 9 other people.
Heterosexuals are beasts. Heterosexuality is bestiality.

Some time ago, in belgium, a pastor and his daughter with whom he had an incestuous relationship killed 10 people. 5 were members of their family. The two heterosexuals got rid of their victims by dissolving their bodies in acid. The heterosexual man was a pastor and a theology teacher.

In Gloucester, Great Britain, frederick and rosemary West who were husband and wife, killed and buried 18 persons. Some were their children.

In the eighties, a heterosexual man in california raped, tortured and killed more than 15 women. the man took sadistic pleasures in seeing the women suffered. One of his methods was to cut them with an electric saw. The man took pleasure in seeing the women shouting in terrible pain.

Several years ago in South America (Colombia) a heterosexual man raped and killed more than 100 girls.

In France the parents of a 5 year old boy martyrized the little boy for years. They beated him and imprisoned him in a little cage. They took pleasure in seeing the little boy suffered.

A few years ago in France a Head of school killed the prostitute he was frequenting because the prostitute no longer wanted him.

There are many other cases of heterosexual atrocities.

Every week (sometimes every day) in the media of the world you can read and hear about heinous crimes committed by heterosexuals.

Heterosexuals like to brag and threaten people about many things. Then for offences and crimes they must be punished more severely because they have no extenuating circumstances.

There are only three possibilities for them. Either they are shut in psychiatric hospitals or they are shut in prisons or they are executed.

It is not because many parents are heterosexual that they are perfect. Many parents and heterosexuals want only to satisfy their vicious desires. Children are just the result of their vices. It is not that because something is necessary that it is perfect. Excrement is necessary and it is not perfect. Heterosexuals are like excrement. They are not perfect, they are disgusting and wicked.

Heterosexuality is no longer necessary to have children. Artificial Insemination is replacing it.

Some heterosexuals say that they have to fornicate to ensure the survival of humankind. Their argument does not convince at all. First we do not need so many children on this earth. On the contrary it will be better if they stop copulating and fornicating. There will be less vices and less problems caused by heterosexuals and overpopulation. If those heterosexuals stop copulating and do not have children we will not regret at all. We will rejoice because there will be less problems and more resources available for people existing on earth. It is better to have quality than quantity, that is, it is better to have fewer people who are better and having a better quality of life than having too many people who are bad and who degrade the quality of life.
Secondly to have children, heterosexuals do not need to have so many copulations. They have thousands times more copulations than necessary. It is as if an employee is asking thousands times more money for the real value of a job or a seller is making people pay thousands times more than the real value of an article.

If those heterosexuals stop copulating the world will be a better place. The world do not need those type of people. There are people more than necessary on this earth. There are also enough smart people on this earth. Many problems (crimes, vices, theft, exploitation, etc) caused by heterosexuals will disappear. So we say, let them stop copulating and having children.

Heterosexuals are the greatest killers and the greatest perverts

Heterosexuals are the greatest killers. Since the beginning of the world heterosexuals have killed as many as the increase in population at a particular period and sometimes much more. For example in 1970 there were 4 billions people. Now there are 6 billions people. In 30 years the population has increased by 2 billions. In the same period heterosexuals have killed approximately the same number of people.

From 1970 to 1999 an average of 50 millions abortions were perpetrated each year by heterosexuals (Data from United Nations and World Health Organization). This means that in 30 yrs, 50x30=1500 millions abortions have been committed. Heterosexuals are guilty of 1.5 billions abortions in t hat period of time. Heterosexuals are guilty of this holocaust and genocide of children. Heterosexuals are worst than the Nazis.

Heterosexuals committed about 150 crimes per year per million people. From 1970 to 1999 the average world population was 5 billions, that is 5000 millions people. Therefore each year heterosexuals committed 5000x150=750000 crimes. For 30 years they committed 30x750000=22,500,000 crimes.

During that period heterosexuals killed also about 100 millions people in wars (soldiers and civil population).

During that period heterosexuals also killed about 100 millions people by various diseases such as syphilis, gonorrhea, herpes, AIDS, tuberculosis, leprosy, etc. In the world 85% of AIDS are caused and transmitted by heterosexuals. AIDS is a heterosexual disease. AIDS means heterosexuality.

During that period heterosexuals have killed and maimed about 100 millions children through wars, molestation, child batterings, ill treatment, lack of care and abandonment. Heterosexuals had also killed and are still killing millions of children in the bellies of their mothers by their furious and savage copulations.

During that period heterosexuals have killed about 1,825 millions people, that is, 1.825 billions (by abortions+crimes+wars+diseases+child batterings and lack of care,etc).

Heterosexuals are therefore the greatest killers, the greatest murderers, the greatest perverts and the greatest monsters.
Heterosexuals are the most dangerous people.

Shame on heterosexuals.

Heterosexuals say they give life to babies but they must remember that for every person alive, they have killed another person. They give life but at what cost. The cost is violence, crimes, vices, perversions, wars, agressions and sins. The price of their life giving is very high. They must also remember that most heterosexuals want only to satisfy their sexual and vicious desires. Children are just the consequences. Heterosexuals have nothing to be proud about having children. On the contrary they should be ashamed of themselves for all the negative and catastrophic effects of their selfish and vicious copulations and fornications.

Heterosexuals commit crimes against children and against humanity

Heterosexuals are perverted people. They are also child abusers and molesters. They have perpetrated almost all of the crimes against children and against humanity. Throughout history they have committed millions of crimes against children. Today too they commit thousands of crimes against children. Thousands more go unnoticed since they are not reported to the police or the press. They have used children only for their own interests.

The children have not asked to be born. Therefore the parents have more responsibility and duty towards the children than the children towards their parents. The parents say they do things for the children. The children too do things for their parents. They give meaning to their lives, they strengthen the relationships of the parents and they give the parents a justification to indulge in sex. Often too the children look after the parents when they get old. The parents have obtained more than they have given. They have been paid back more than enough.

In spite of this, heterosexuals have beaten and ill-treated children for centuries.

They are also responsible of child labour. Many heterosexuals want only to satisfy their sexual desires without caring about the consequences. They have caused 300 millions children to be born in miserable and dangerous conditions. They have put these children to slavery. The figures in million on child labour by United Nations are thus:

Brazil : 25 millions
Colombia : 3 M
Mexico : 10 M Pakistan : 3 M
United States : 1 M Philippines : 3.5 M
Italy : 0.5 M India : 50 M
Thailand : 3 M

and many millions in other countries also.

Battered children most of the times happen in families and are caused by heterosexuals. The parents are not punished sufficiently. Here is a heart breaking case among thousands others:

Police detective breaks down in child abuse case

A couple tied their son to a door for two years because he was not born a girl, a court heard. Police found the four year old boy and his two year old brother with extensive injuries in a house in suburban Sydney, police woman Lola Scott told the court.

The parents, Donald Cappeti, 39, and his wife Robyn, 38, face eight charges of grievous bodily harm. The prosecution said they were the worst child abusers Australia had seen.

Scott wept as she told a preliminary hearing how David Capetti, who sufferered from gangrene in one foot, was tied to a door for two years as punishment for not being born a girl. He weighed only 25 lbs and had severe rope burns on his body, she said.

David and his brother Darren had not been bathed for two months and were fed only occasionally. The younger child had extensive burns, Scott added. The parents will appear in court again in September 12. Magistrate John Hiatt refused bail, saying the offences were "too horrific".

Heterosexuals are liars and lascivious

Heterosexuals hide themselves behind children. Heterosexuals always use children as pretext. In the past they had 10 to 20 children. If they had really wanted all those children, they should continue to have 20 children. But nowadays contraceptives exist and they have only 1 to 3 children. This is proof that they place the satisfaction of their desires before everything. Heterosexuals are uncontrollable. If contraceptives do not exist, they would still have 20 children, with all the disastrous consequences for the family, society, the country and nature.

Moreover, all those sexual relationships are not necessary. To have 3 children only about 10 copulations are sufficient. But heterosexual couples have on average 4000 copulations in their lives. This means that the 3990 relationships are not necessary. They use children to justify them. They hide themselves behind children.

Artificial Insemination must be popularized. All the companies manufacturing contraceptives will be converted into Artificial Insemination clinics. Then the sexual act will be a thing of the past, just as the washing machine is replacing more and more washing by hand.

Heterosexuals are uncontrollable (compulsive desire - a mental illness). They are also egoist, irresponsible, vicious and lascivious. They commit millions of abortions which are premeditated crimes. They are thus criminals.

The ugliness of heterosexuality

The perversities of heterosexual people

When the woman becomes a wheelbarrow
The man stands between the legs of the woman and holds her legs with his hands. The woman has her head down with her hands on the floor. The woman ressembles a wheelbarrow that the man is going to push. As the woman moves in front with her hands, the man follows her and strikes her with his penis in her hole. Both get excited viciously and perversely. The man pushes the woman-wheelbarrow. Now and then they stop and the man strikes the woman more furiously and viciously with his penis in her hole. When the woman moves with her hands on the floor, the man follows her. When the man pushes the woman, she moves by making steps with her hands. After being perversely satisfied, they stop. From time to time they perform this vicious sexuality.

This is only one example of the perversities of heterosexuals.

Heterosexuals are the greatest fuckers and the most vicious and dirty. They fuck women in front, at the back, at the top (mouth), in the middle (between breasts). They are cunt lickers, ass lickers, shit eater and urine drinker. Their houses are like brothels and toilets. Their houses are stinky of shit and urine. They have turned the world into brothels.
They are also the greatest child abusers and the greatest rapists. They are also the greatest murderers. They commit almost all abortions which are premeditated crimes. They fill the world with their shit and their filth. Almost all prostitutes and brothels are heterosexual ones.
Their riches and their comfort are based greatly on theft, exploitation and domination.

Heterosexuality is bestiality
Heterosexuals are violent, vicious, criminal, depraved Heterosexuals are perverted Heterosexuals are thieves
Heterosexuals are fornicators
Heterosexuals are rapists Heterosexuals are vampires. They like to bite their partners like vampires.
Heterosexuals are sinners. They commit all sorts of sins.
Heterosexuals are cunt lickers
Heterosexuals are ass lickers
Heterosexual men are hungry of women. They want to devour women.
Heterosexual men want to stab women between their legs with their penises.
Heterosexuals are corrupting and rotting the world.
Heterosexuality is despicable and repulsive.
Heterosexuality is beastly and sick.
Heterosexuals are bestial
Heterosexuality is bestiality
Heterosexuals are disgusting and nauseating.
Their lifestyles are disgusting, nauseating and repulsive.

Heterosexual men are so vicious on women's breasts and in their vaginas that they cause breast and uterine cancers in women.

Heterosexuals are abominable
Heterosexuals will be condemned to hell

Artificial Insemination Clinics should be encouraged to be set up.
Artificial Insemination will replace heterosexuality.

Heterosexual Terrorism

A man chases a woman, catches her, throws her on the floor. He pulls down his trousers, lifts her dress and removes her slip. He then starts to stab her between her legs with his penis. He stabs her furiously, savagely, bestially, viciously and perversely. He continues to stab her, stabs her again and again and now and then insulting her with obscene words. He takes vicious pleasure in seeing the woman at his mercy and enduring his perverse sexual assault.

Let women chain heterosexual men, lead them like animals, whip them and strike them with their needle heel shoes. Let women urinate and defecate on heterosexual men. They will like it because it is in the nature of heterosexual men to live under women's cunts. For women's cunts they will be on their knees and crawl like an animal.

Let Heterosexuals Die from Calamities

African and islamic countries are homophobic. So when AIDS, earthquakes, wars and other calamities strike them, don't help them. Let them die. Let heteros die because by helping them, you will help your enemies and your oppressors to oppress you more. You will save your oppressors and give them the chance to attack and oppress you more and again. Therefore don't help them. Let heteros die.

More than 90% of AIDS cases in the world are heterosexual ones. Let heteros die of AIDS. Let AIDS remove those hetero viruses and hetero pests. AIDS, earthquakes and other calamities are the anti-viruses to eliminate and reduce the heterosexual viruses and heterosexual pests. Let those hetero fornicators get destroyed. They would otherwise spread their filth in the world.

Let women chain heterosexual men, lead them like animals, whip them and strike them with their needle heel shoes. Let women urinate and defecate on heterosexual men. They will like it because it is in the nature of heterosexual men to live under women's cunts. For women's cunts they will be on their knees and crawl like an animal.

Countries and States that oppress gays are terrorist states. They should be attacked like Afghanistan and Irak. They have no right to exist in a modern civilized world. The Vatican, Iran, Saudi Arabia, Zimbabwe, Namibia, Nigeria, Malaysia, Poland, etc are terrorist states. They deserve the treatment reserved for terrorist states.

Hetero pervert, you are rotting the world. All hetero bandits, hetero terrorists and hetero fornicators should be nuked. The world will be better without those hetero shit and hetero pests.

I was there the first night we were allowed to operate below 3800, worked an EA. Lotta ticked off VEs, Helluva mess. Lotta fun.

You're almost 40 years late. The precedent was carved in stone as a result of the Incentive Licensing R&Os of the late 1960s and they just did it again. I'm not familiar with the 'wayback history of it but maybe there were similar occurrences before 1950.

That sort of stuff is handled by the upper-level politically sensitive types at the FCC, our fates are crafted by the OET jorneymen. The BPL flap excepted.

Who audits this process to make sure they all get "equal reads" and consideration? Where's the published policies on the topic? Answer: There ain't neither. You can fill in the rest.

You're the local manager of the FCC group which totes up the comments on ham radio NPRMs, you also have a budget and a calander to manage and you know you gotta plow through the piles of comments in as efficient a maner as you can. Ordinary common sense and business smarts indicate that you'll pass out some informal set of criteria or another about who's comments to spend serious time on and who's to just give a quick scan and toss into the "agree"or "disagree" stacks with all sorts of variations in between. Considering the fact that Anderson's only inputs to the process have been a stream of workload for them from a non-ham bush-leaguer it wouldn't surprise me if they also had a stack for his drivel marked "cranks". Ten second scan, done, flick, into the stack it goes.

(a) They're toying with us for jollies.
(b) They know it doesn't matter one way or another.
(c) They're internally deadlocked on the subject just like we are.
(d) It'll show up in Omnibus II.

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization. Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner, http://tinyurl.com/ehu3v

Ya know, The more I read SC's post the more respect I have for SC. He's right. Trash like "John" and the "retarded no-code wonder" are what will rid the bands of the ARS.

Maybe Mork should clean up his act and try to behave a little more like

You know, if you're going to leave my nick in the attributions, Morgan, leaving a bit of context wouldn't hurt. Otherwise, one would get the idea that you are (falsely, I might add) accusing me of being a "criminal". Just so you know, RRAP isn't "yours", it's mine, or at least AUK's. You and your pet troll just happen to have some big ideas.

their contact info. You are scared of being 'outed' because you are a pathological abuser of usenet, and people rightly despise you for it.
You're afraid of being reported to the authorities or, better, visited

You're so fucking scared you've built up this whole sick mythology about

that only gets turned on for big-time terrorists. That's because I chose to be anonymous. Some people don't. Only really stupid dicks like you choose the sort of semi-anonymity which leaves you in constant fear.

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." So when journalists link the Yippies with misleading bedfellows, at best it's careless shorthand; at worst it's deliberate demonization. Osama bin Laden wanted an aircraft to crash into the Pentagon. Abbie Hoffman merely wanted to levitate it." -- Paul Krassner, http://tinyurl.com/ehu3v outing personal contact info in x-poasted subject lines:

"Plenty of people post under their real names and do not attempt to hide their contact info. You are scared of being 'outed' because you are a pathological abuser of usenet, and people rightly despise you for it.
You're afraid of being reported to the authorities or, better, visited by a couple of guys with baseball bats. Other people don't have this obsessive fear. Ward Hardman himself has posted plenty of personal information - nothing that anyone else added was hidden in any way.
You're so fucking scared you've built up this whole sick mythology about different categories of bad dudes who 'out' scum like you.

"Meanwhile you are the ugliest pigfucker in the universe. You are the coward without ethics. You call me a 'newbie' - ha! what an asshole you are. Those who want to remain anonymous do so. There is absolutely no

that only gets turned on for big-time terrorists. That's because I chose to be anonymous. Some people don't. Only really stupid dicks like you choose the sort of semi-anonymity which leaves you in constant fear.

"When I told Abbie Hoffman that he was the first one who made me laugh since Lenny Bruce died, Hoffman said, "Really? He was my god." The combination of satirical irreverence and sense of justice that Bruce and Hoffman shared was the real spirit behind the Yippies--a term I coined to describe a phenomenon that already existed: an organic coalition of stoned hippies and political activists who engaged in such actions as throwing money on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange, then explaining to reporters the meaning of that symbolism. Folksinger Phil Ochs summed it up: "A demonstration should turn you on, not turn you off." Dear Slow, I'm a new ham. I passed my Novice Exams in November of 1986, so in Ham Years, I'm a new ham.

What do I like best about appliance operating? I like the features and the ease of cleanup. The new GE range we have allows me to scroll up to the desired operating temperature, and push the "ON" button. Then "Pre" is shown on the temp readout until the oven comes up to temperature. And the smooth glass stove top is a snap to cleanup. If something should boil over, you don't have to lift up the burners and take the spill pans out, etc. Just a quick wipe with a damp dish cloth. It doesn't get much better than that.

Thanks for asking.

When you passed the FCC exam - you are an Amateur Radio Operator period -- plain and simple.

Whether you passed a 20 wpm code test or no code - you are a Ham

Whether you had to draw the schematic for a Colpitts Oscillator or not - you are a Ham

Whether you faced the steely-eyed FCC examiner or a VE -- you are a Ham

Those who say otherwise are shrouded in elitism and a synonym for elitism is snobbery - plain and simple

This is 2006, not 1920

BOTH are important.

If you're not running a homebrew or at least home-assembled rig, who are you to call someone else an appliance operator?

What good are technical discussions if they don't translate into actual working radio systems?

Trying to hijack the thread again, Mark?

Looks as if Chris put you in a corner when he said, "And before you go any further, be aware that I used to work with Falvey back in the 80's when I was employed as a geophysicist by the Gulf Research Company both in Harmarville, Pennsylvania and in Houston, Texas. We sponsored part of Falvey's research.

In short, I'm a real geophysicist. That's why I seriously doubt that you are."

Somebody called you out on your lies and now you have no comment save to accuse "Steve" of harrassing you again. You have no shame, do you?

>Trying to hijack the thread again, Mark?
no thread to hijack

just another of steve effort to conuct harrassment and get an answer to question I refuse to answer and one that is off topic and not proper to begin with
....

The question is only "not proper" because it put you on the spot as being a liar and you are uncomfortable about being exposed as such.
Who are YOU to determine what is on topic or not on topic, anyway?
You have no credibility. No life, no common sense, and certainly no degree in geophysics.
All you have is Usenet and a sick fixation on Steve.

"In fact, Jesus said something about that, I do believe. He said, "Knock it off already with the warmongering and the hating of each other and let's all get some wine and party like it's 2012." Then again, he never saw Karl Rove stab the nation with the dull ice pick of bogus fear. He never heard George W. Bush describe brutal war and the death of tens of thousands as "just a comma" in world history.

I can't, I canned my League membership when they started pushing for dumbed down Hams. I didn't want my continued dues payments to seem like I agreed with their policies.

Unfortunately, the Dumb-It-Down no-code ham radio crowd are too lazy to wipe. They'll still hang around and the rest of us will have to smell

Robesin is absent. Lots of uniques showing up. Maybe we need to run

Isn't Woger eligible for one of those awards? He's over on N9OGL's web site yelling that he wasn't beaten up by skinheads last week, and I think that ought to at least earn him an honorable mention. N9OGL had no clue about what Woger meant, because there was no previous mention of skinheads anywhere on Todd's web site. That didn't stop Woger from telling Todd off about the skinheads anyway.

That's real kookism. That's definitely award material.

I'm not saying it'll ever happen, just that it explains why it takes so long to get anything from FCC and why the result is so unlike what is proposed.

Amazing; A new ham is excited about getting his ticket and these clowns get into his face about CW.

Next we will hear more griping about the hobby dying. No wonder. Just read these posts, who would want to be associated with such clowns. I am always amazed these clowns are so familiar with CB model numbers etc.

Indeed we could dispense with much of the technical qualifications some day. The technical part is basically an attempt to make sure the amatuer is competent enough to operate their equipment in a maner that does not interfere with other services outside of his designated allocation of spectrum, in other words, within FCC regulations. At such a time when all equipment is made idiot proof and all hams use store bought idiot proofed gear we may see this.So far the one experiment at this has failed. You think you have something idiot proof and then guess what, someone makes a better idiot. So I am not worried about requirement of theory going away. As far a CW is concerned to gain the privledges hams have today they had to show they were a national asset. Part of being that asset was our ability to process emergency traffic should the need arrive. At the time CW was needed to accomplish this. It is no longer needed to meet our obligation of service. OF course this begs the question, can we fullfil our obligation. To this I believe we can, but are we really needed. CW has been replaced by other technologies, it would make more sense to require typing skills than CW, an idea I dont think is so bad even though I may have trouble with twenty wpm on a keyboard.

Thats all they know how to do, griping is their pastime. 8-)
I don't think they know how to say something constructive with a positive attitude. It is their attitude thats helping the hobby to die.

And I am NOT ashamed to post my REAL name or call sign, nor that I have never felt the need to learn code.

Robert Kubichek N9LVU

BTW: I help people when they have problems on their computers, whether by teaching, or actually fixing the equipment.. It's more rewarding.. I used to feel the same about ham radio..

The "service" provided by the Amateur Radio Service is a service provided by the federal government to the citizens who meet the amateur radio licensing requirements. There is no governmental requirement or obligation that amateur radio operators render any public service at all. Amateur radio licensees are not even required to own a radio.

"Service", in this context, is just an administrative division of government.

I have listened to hundreds of CW contacts, and the above is mostly the norm.
I exaggerate a bit, but it is rare that anyone talks about anything other than a few very simple things. I have yet to listen to a complex conversation on CW... The most complicated thing I have heard is W1AW code practice, and some of the traffic nets.

Well, you wouldn't if you spent all of your time on CW. Things are very polite on those subbands. If however, you ever listened to 20 meters around 14.313, you might have a different idea of what ham radio was about.
For some reason that frequency was full of profane garbage mouthed hams, and lots of infighting in the '70s and '80s.

Perhaps, but nothing like some of the very cheap sweep tube transceivers of the late 1960's, and early '70's. Swans that drifted furiously, and practically invented the term TVI...

What are the bad HF SSB rigs of today? I would bet that even the absolute worst is cleaner than anything that was available in the '60's, and '70's...
If only because the regulations got tighter on spurious emissions from new gear.

Nope, I did my Advanced from basic principles. I used the ARRL Radio Amateur's Handbook as my guide to rules and regulations. The technical side of my studying came from the handbook, and a variety of other radio and engineering sources.

I looked at friend's copy of one of the the license manuals that was available after my test, and the questions and answers were very close. It was nothing like the manuals that are available today, but still so close as to be a cheat.

I have built and operated a number of entirely home brew radios. Slow Code is the one complaining about appliance operators, of which it appears he is one.

but typing (with maybe the option of some other test like solderiring tries to stamp us the hams out in single mold which explains the vitriol of the some the ProCoder the Nocoders are rejecting the mold they fit so well into. I would love to see a system

Listening is one thing, participating is another. I've had many, many CW QSOs that were far more complex than your example. Discussions of rigs, antennas, jobs, family, plans for the near future (vacation, home improvement, etc.), experiences in the other's location, and much more.

The stereotypical hello/goodbye QSO is usually the result of these factors: poor conditions, unskilled operator(s), nature of the QSO (DX, contest, just checking a new rig)

Of course somebody has to initiate - to say something beyond hello...

Well, I don't know about you. But for me, knowing Morse Code meant I could build and use simple(r) radio systems to try out an idea.

If someone who isn't a trained electronics person wants to design and build their amateur radio station, what sort of project should they build? A complete multiband SSB transceiver? Or a simple CW rig?

Sure. But how many hams were involved, out of the hundreds of thousands on the air?

Sure - but remember that those rigs were designed 40+ years ago. They should be judged by the standards of their time.

It depends on what you consider "bad". Last FD we had some rigs that were unusable because they put out wideband phase noise that messed up stations on adjacent bands! Those rigs might have met the letter of the law when new, but they sure made a lot of hash in the real world.

OTOH, serviceability of many ham rigs is very low. Even if you can deal with SMT, a lot of them use house-numbered parts that become unobtanium in a few years.

There were a couple of different license manuals available back then.

The ARRL LM was a reprint of FCC's study guide. Those FCC study guides were produced by FCC to indicate the areas of knowledge you needed to have for the test. They were essay format even though the tests were multiple-choice.

AMECO and others rewrote them into multiple choice format.

A fellow named Dick Bash stationed himself outside FCC offices and bought information from people who had just taken the tests. He was able to recreate a pretty close version of the actual test by that method. FCC decided not to prosecute him even though he published books that were very close to the actual tests.

Then it all became academic with the VE system.

Exactly. You are not an appliance operator - nor are you calling anybody else an appliance operator.

Exactly. I didn't mean to imply that you were an appliance operator, Chuck. Just that if "Slow Code" is going to call other people names, he should be ready to back up his claims with actions. So far, we see nothing.

Of course, one should not take "Slow Code" too seriously - if at all.

Kenwood TS-820S. I got a good deal because it had a few bugs. I spent some of the evenings between the exam session and my ticket arriving (that would be my GENERAL ticket, I skipped Novice and Technician) going through it cleaning switches, adding ground straps to a couple circuit boards and adding 17m to the 'AUX' position on the band switch. By the time my ticket arrived in the mail it was ready. I worked Clipperton Island the second day I was on the air and didn't realize it was quite the DX catch until months later.

So, after your license came in the mail what did you start weenie whining about first?

To promote the mode, sure, but to require it no. I could make the same claim about RTTY, and Slow Scan. When they were popular, folks on those modes were all as polite as could be.

The impolite behavior seems to center around SSB. Probably because the mode requires essentially no effort.

It only takes a few. As I remember from those SSB wars in the '70's and '80's, a several hams were prosecuted. They were all General Class or higher.
And because of the time frame, in which they were licensed, they had passed the CW hurdle. I recall that playing with their keyers on the SSB segment was part of their hijinks. A whole lot of "FU" and other acronyms were mixed in with the echo boxes, and microphone raking.

listen to.

Fortunately, that wideband phase noise doesn't carry beyond a few hundred yards from the radio. It used to be a really big problem with the early solid state radios... But not so much so with the newer rigs. Field Day was where I first noticed the effect.... Key the mike, and all bands were awash in hiss, even before the first word was spoken. Icom comes to mind.
Having a Clegg FM27B around on field day is a real treat too...not!

Entirely the result of meeting the customer's demands for in expensive feature laden radios that fit in packages smaller than a dictionary.

I think my friends "manual" might have been Ameco.

I don't think Bash was doing that until after the VE system came on line...
but I don't recall for sure.

Actually, these days for what little operating I do, I am an appliance operator. Because of my early ham experience, and the fact that I am an EE, I know how to design and build, even if I don't chose to do so right now. Ham radio probably figures heavily in my being an EE.

My general belief is if you have passed the test that is in force, you are a ham... period. Beyond passing whatever is required, I don't care how you got here, just what you do now that you are here.

I passed the Novice exam in Nov 1986. 5WPM. I'm presently a General, so I'm fully qualified to work out of band Frenchmen on 6M or on HF.
Maybe they'll even put me in for the ARRL's A-1 Operator Club.

No doubt Lennie's "on land" experience was an illiegal use of

He didn't get a response because :

(a) His comments were concise, well written and in proper

The question I have is what relevence do YOU have in Amateur Radio, Brain?

So far just about every topic you've cared to express an opinion on as an alleged informed respondent has been WRONG.

Why not? Morkie's been using that language for a decade now and I've not seen YOU chastize him once about it.

And my preference for avoiding such language notwithstanding, the quote is spot-on. Morkie got caught lying again.

Your call is the butt of jokes in almost every State of the Union that has a respondant in this forum, Morkie. And now in Australia and New Zealand....You have entirely new audiences to learn about your lies, deceit, cheating, perversion and cowardice.

Perhaps someone there will find interest in your lies about your military service, multiple college degrees (yet can't spell correctly), business ownership, or your multiple instances of run-in's with the law over your poor care of your elderly father...?!?!

But I doubt it.

So is rape, sodomy, welfare fraud, child molestation and tax evasion.

But none of those seem to deter you.

the simple answer to your question I think is frakly no not everyone can

I spent 5 years in my teens back in the 70 trying on a regaular with the aid of licensed code tested hams I took more than 100 code test (then the final straw was I could never pass both transmisting and freceiving on a single day) so for today I would have to say it is basicaly impossible for to USE the mode, althought if I had the sort of time I hade 30 years ago I might manage to pass a test on the subject

what proportion suffers as badly as myself few I grant you, ut how mcuh suffering is enough to inflict and how can we imagine it does not affect the service (or the hobby as you lie)

back to cut and paste the same lie over and over I see steve

as I said you lied in claiming sodomy is a crime it is not and the sodomy were ruled unconstititonal by the Supremes

the rest of your list are crimes but you get right that there being ilegal is not what stops me from comiting them (all but tax evasion were not evasion not ilgeal I would comit it) being a Moral peron deter me from comting the rest of the crimes on the list.

You mean like your "id theft is a crime" responses?

You mean like your idiotic "extrement" subject lines, of which there are a doesn or more of today?

> as I said you lied in claiming sodomy is a crime it is not and the

The Supremes declared sodomy isn't a crime?

Was that before or after "Baby Love" or "Ain't No Mountian High Enough"...?!?!

You are NOT a "moral" merson, Morkie.

You HAVE commmited or been under investigation for all of those save tax evasion, and according to what I've been able to find so far, you're probably guilty of that, too.

> moral fibir which I have and you clearly lack Robeson

What's "fibir", fatboy?

You mean "FIBBER"...?!?! In that case I'd agree since you're the biggest fibber in USENET.

But you ARE "Morkie", and I've explained why.

You act like Mork...You talk like Mork...You "rationalize" things like Mork.

You ARE Mork.

Highly unlikely particulary in cases like Anderson's nonsense and I'll only believe it when I see it. Unless you gots documentation to the contrary or you've been there yourself.

I doubt that there's much (e) involved, they've been patrolling up and down our back road in the RF wilderness for decades and they're quite used to it. Used to us and our level of noisy BS. In any event thee and me are bulletproof, we're 20WPM Extras so I could care less when they bite the bullet and do whatever they're gonna do about the code test.

'Course I thought I was bulletproof in 1967 too when I had a General .

Eternity is not a particulary long time in gummint buracracies like the FCC. Been there, been part of it.

> and why the result is so unlike what is > proposed.

. . . "Mother knows best" . . .

Somebody wrote in a post in QRZ.com that they'd been in direct e-mail contact with the FCC about the anomalies and confusion in the R&O and the FCC agreed that the R&O needs more work before it goes to the Register. That'll push implemetation of a cleaned-up version out until God knows when. Reset: Game started over.

I noticed in another of your posts that you didn't understand why the 80M CW band and 75M phone band are called what they are. Or something akin to that. It's an ancient convention which is conceptually useful in a number of ways and is not even close to "numerically rigorous". It's a simplistic way of identifying the ham bands and nothing more.

The real numbers go like this:

3.5 Mhz = 86M
3.75 Mhz = 80M
3.8M hz = 79M
4.0 Mhz = 75M
7.0 Mhz = 42.8M
7.5 Mhz = 40M
14 Mhz = 21.4M
15 Mhz = 20M

. . all I care about is that when I punch the button which sez "80" I hear a lotta beeping going on and when I hit the button marked "75" it's the motormouths at play . .

No lies, Morkie. You call me a "threadjacker" for chainging subject lines, yet you have posted literally 1000's of subjectlines about "excrement".

It was bad enough that you tried to quote it out of context, and even worse that you make allegations per others that YOU are CLEARLY guilty of.

Your "excrement" subject lines make you guilty of the same thing you accuse others of, fatboy.

Now who's allegedly "gay bashing", Mork?

"homo boy" won a civil rights violation suit for a man in SFO that found an e-mail referencing him....A figure in six figures, as I remember.

How can anyone "forge" your "wifes" name, Morkie...?!?!

Forst of all, YOU have mispelled it in this forum more often than anyone else has, and secondly, YOU'RE NOT MARRIED!

> nor are they cut and pasted they are typed out every time

We can tell....The typos are rampant...

Funny, though...All of MY posts are "typed out" yet your typos outnumber me 10,000 to 1. Sheeeeesh.

It is when you're jumping state lines to avoid the investigations, Morkie.

And besides...YOU have admitted THIS VERY DAY that you've started taking your daddie to "physical therapy" as a result of being taunted about your MIStreatment of your father.

MY WORDS prove that YOUR WORDS are lies, Morkie.

Stop doing it and you'll find your silly posts will be better tolerated.

Continue as you are, continue to get your silliness rubbed in your nose.

Period.

No lies here, Morkie.

You're a tax evading, child molesting, welfare cheating sodomizer.

THE SUPREMES said that sodomy was not a crime?

Was that before "Baby Love" or "Ain't No Mountain Hig Enough"...?!?!

Nope...YOU are.

You claimed to be taking daddie to "physical therapy" at about 11:15 CDT today

You were still posting to RRAP well after 12:30.

You're now back before 1PM.

It's more than 30 minutes from your QTH to any place in Houghton
County where a licensed physical therapist practices.

Any GOOD physical therapist qould take at least 45 minutes to an hour with the patient to assess their curent state, prep them for the procedure, do the procedure, then discharge them from the office.

So...We have Morkie in yet ANOTHER lie...Most likely yet another dodge so KB9RQZ can further STEAL his daddie's Medicare benifits.

It doesn't matter. We've caught you abusing your father again.

You claimed to be taking daddie to "physical therapy" at about
11:15 CDT today

You were still posting to RRAP well after 12:30.

You're now back before 1PM.

It's more than 30 minutes from your QTH to any place in Houghton
County where a licensed physical therapist practices.

Any GOOD physical therapist qould take at least 45 minutes to an hour with the patient to assess their curent state, prep them for the procedure, do the procedure, then discharge them from the office.

So...We have Morkie in yet ANOTHER lie...Most likely yet another
dodge so KB9RQZ can further STEAL his daddie's Medicare benifits.

What lies about Houghton's geography, Porkie?

Liar.

You claimed to be taking daddie to "physical therapy" at about
11:15 CDT today

You were still posting to RRAP well after 12:30.

You're now back before 1PM.

It's more than 30 minutes from your QTH to any place in Houghton County where a licensed physical therapist practices.

Any GOOD physical therapist qould take at least 45 minutes to an hour with the patient to assess their curent state, prep them for the procedure, do the procedure, then discharge them from the office.

So...We have Morkie in yet ANOTHER lie...Most likely yet another dodge so KB9RQZ can further STEAL his daddie's Medicare benifits.

Steve, K4YZ
